

FLYERS PLAN START TODAY FOR AMERICA FROM AZORES

Seaplane, Built for Rough Weather, Functions Perfectly in 15-Hour Flight From Brest, France.

TO CROSS ATLANTIC BY SOUTHERN ROUTE

Aviators Expect to Return by Great Circle Course if Journey to New York Is Successful.

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, July 23.—A Reuter dispatch from Horta says that the French seaplane La Fregate, which arrived in the Azores this morning on the first leg of a transatlantic flight, was being re-fueled, and that Lieut. Paulin Paris, commander of the expedition, planned to take off some time today for Newfoundland.

By the Associated Press.
HORTA, Island of Fayal, Azores, July 23.—The French seaplane La Fregate (the Frigate-Bird) arrived here this morning from Brest, France, completing the first leg of its transatlantic flight to New York by way of the Azores, and Bermuda.

With Naval Lieut. Paulin Paris in command, the plane came down at the unrefined surface of the harbor at 7:20 a. m. (12:40 a. m. St. Louis time). It was a bright morning and there was no wind. Lieut. Paris and his two companions, Relief Pilot Marrot and Wireless Operator, completed the flight of 1600 miles in 15 hours and 15 minutes. They alighted beside a French cruiser carrying a supply of petrol for the next leg of their flight. They plan to head for Bermuda, stopping there to refuel if necessary before continuing to New York.

The engines of the plane worked perfectly throughout the flight, the airman said. They were taken aboard their fuel ship, the French cruiser Ville D'Ys where they were soon put to bed for a good rest.

An officer from the cruiser who came ashore at Horta said, "The flyers were tired out after their trip and are now sound asleep on board. They probably will come ashore this evening."

Lieut. Paris is making his flight under the joint auspices of the French Naval and Commerce departments.

If upon his arrival in New York he thinks a return flight is feasible, he has been instructed to fly back by way of Newfoundland. The Frenchmen covered the first leg of their flight with clock-like regularity. At 1:00 a. m. Greenwich mean time, this morning, they were about 370 miles from the Azores.

A radio message picked up from the plane at that hour read: "We are at 41 north latitude, 22 west longitude. We put on good again and are now flying 95 knots. Everything continues to work very well. The regularity of our progress is perfect."

The radio of the plane, capable of sending and receiving on both long and short wave lengths and the flyers kept their promise to send out hourly radio bulletins of their progress. Most of the messages were technical reports, but one flashed at 10:20 last night said:

"We have not fared, but drank some coffee."

Flight Being Made for Science. The flight of La Fregate is more a scientific than a sporting affair. It is the first French effort to cross the North Atlantic by seaplane, and preparations for it have been going on for more than a year.

The plane is built to stand rough weather not only in the air but on the surface of the ocean. It is equipped with two 480-horsepower Gnome-Rhone-Jupiter motors set tandem fashion directly at top of the big biplane. It carried aboard is sufficient food for days should the plane be forced down on the water.

P. C. Keller, vice president of the company that installed the motors in the seaplane, left France or After disposing of minor bequests of $23,000 to friends and employees, the residue of the estate was bequeathed to St. Luke's for establishment of a building to be known as the Diagnostic Clinic and Research Laboratory.

What money remains after erection and equipment of the building shall be used, according to the will, for maintenance of the new clinic. Valuable oil paintings that adorn the Fowler home are left to the St. Louis Art Museum.

The St. Louis Union Trust Co., named executor, filed the will for probate.

GIRL COMPELS FATHER TO TAKE NOVELIST ALONG

Maxwell Bodenheim Departs From Hyannis, Mass., With Dr. M. J. Loeb and Daughter.

SHE REFUSES TO LEAVE WITHOUT HIM

"I Know What I Want; I Know What I Intend to Do; I Have a Mind of My Own" She Tells Parent.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
HYANNIS, Mass., July 23.—Gladys Loeb, 17-year-old writer, apparently was in command today of the situation which involved herself, her father, Dr. Martin J. Loeb, and Maxwell Bodenheim, novelist and host.

The girl leading the way, Bodenheim carrying her suitcase, and her father trailing in the rear, the three left the Hyannis Inn yesterday for an unannounced destination. They boarded a New Bedford-bound bus.

The father, who arrived in Provincetown Saturday with the avowed intention of giving Bodenheim a thrashing, had changed his mind. This change of front, according to a taxi driver, who brought them here from Provincetown late Saturday night, followed a bitter row between the two men. It was Gladys who dominated the situation. When her father decided to return to New York and attempt to ride out of Provincetown, the daughter announced she would not leave without the novelist.

Inducements were made, but to no avail. The girl remained adamant. The father finally was compelled to send the taxi to the novelist's cottage and request him to join them a few miles on the outskirts of the town. Bodenheim promptly complied. On his arrival, however, the father turned from his daughter and started to upbraid Bodenheim.

Gladys during the argument stood by defending the novelist against her father. Dr. Loeb, realizing that he was handicapped, finally admitted it was useless to continue the argument and at the suggestion of Bodenheim ordered the chauffeur to bring them to the inn here.

Arriving at the inn, Dr. Loeb advanced to the desk, requested three rooms for the night, and signed the register "Dr. Martin J. Loeb and family."

It was a long ride the three took before arriving here. First they drove to Falmouth and then to Hyannis. Once the taxi broke down and a halt had to be made for repairs. Then along came another automobile which collided with the Loeb machine and the jar tossed Gladys and the novelist almost through the windshield while her father was bruised about the knee.

"I know what I want. I know what I intend to do. I have a mind of my own," was her repeated injunction to her father's attempts at reasoning and persuasion.

Gladys disappeared from home last Tuesday. The fact that she was missing became public after the body of Miss Virginia Drew, who had asked Bodenheim to criticize her poetry, was found in the Hudson River, New York, on Thursday. Gladys also had attempted suicide.

200,000 WORKMEN CAN'T EARN LIVING AT PRESENT TRADES

British Industrial Board Advises Their Transfer to Other Occupations at Once.

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, July 23.—More than 200,000 workmen, many of them married, cannot expect to earn a livelihood from the industries in which they have been employed, says a report made today by the Industrial Transference Board. The report says these men must be moved from distressed areas in England to other places where they can start life anew.

The board says these 200,000 cannot pay the cost of moving or wait for a week's wages in order to defer such costs. Assistance must be given them.

"It is a hard thing to tell a number of families, and even whole communities, that unless they leave all their familiar surroundings they will not be able to earn an honest living," said the report, "but we should be shirking every inference from the facts, if we did not emphasize this as the first and strongest lesson that has come from the work of the board."

CALLES REMOVES LABOR MINISTER, FOE OF OBREGON

Luis N. Morones Is Ousted From Cabinet Post and Two Subordinates Submit Resignations.

REMOVAL QUIETS TROUBLED SITUATION

Police Seek Associate of Retiring Official as a Link Between Plotters and the Assassin.

By the Associated Press.
MEXICO CITY, July 23.—Gen. Antonio Rios Zertuche, Chief of Police of Mexico City, said today that a full confession had been obtained from Jose de Leon Toral, accused assassin of President-elect Obregon, but that he was unable as yet to disclose its contents.

MEXICO CITY, July 23.—In deference to sustained public demand from many quarters, President Calles late last night removed from office Luis N. Morones, Minister of Industry, Commerce and Labor.

Ardent Obregon followers here accused Morones of having been the "intellectual author" of the assassination of President-elect Alvaro Obregon. Morones was dismissed by the usual procedure of permitting him to tender his formal resignation, which was accepted without delay.

The peremptory dismissal of Morones has had a quieting effect on the troubled situation and has ended most of the talk of taking direct and overt action against the labor leader. "We do not look for further bloodshed," said Col. Ricardo Topete, leader of the Obregon bloc in Congress. Topete was one of those who led armed parties swearing to kill Morones Tuesday night after the assassination.

In the absence from the capital of Aaron Saenz, Governor of Sonora and mentioned for Provisional President to succeed Calles, Topete is the acknowledged leader in the Capital of Obregon's followers. His statement that his followers will keep peace is considered as assuring a calm state of affairs for a while at least.

Complaints to Calles.

"The elimination of Morones greatly simplifies the situation," Col. Topete said. During the afternoon the Obregon leaders called on President Calles and submitted evidence they regarded as supporting their charges against Morones, whereupon the President, who had previously refused to act without proof, demanded Morones' resignation.

Antonio Diaz Soto y Gama, leader of the agrarian party, considered the greatest orator in the Chamber of Deputies and spokesmen for Obregon on public occasions, went a step further when he gave out statements bluntly accusing Morones of responsibility for the killing.

"There isn't a man, woman or child in Mexico," he declared, "that accepts the official charges that the Catholic clergy inspired the assassination of President-elect Obregon. Everybody knows Morones did it. Morones must go or President Calles' administration will forfeit the confidence of the public."

When Obregon was shot last Tuesday afternoon, the public began to cry out its suspicion that Morones was responsible. He was known to be Obregon's bitterest enemy and had been quoted more than once as saying "either Obregon or I must go."

Morones' Letter of Resignation.

In his letter of resignation, Morones referred to the Obregonista party as "our enemies."

"With the vile assassination of Gen. Obregon as a motive," the letter said, "some enemies of the Regional Confederation of Workmen of Mexico, to whom we have the honor to belong, have seen fit to indicate that our presence in a public post is an obstacle to clearing up the responsibility for the aforesaid homicide, and an obstacle to the maintenance of the revolutionary solidarity in this country."

"Since the declaration of our enemies give the organized proletariat an opportunity to demonstrate by our conduct that we have never constituted an obstacle to better understanding to the best political interests of the revolutionary family, we have the honor of presenting to you our resignation from the public posts with which

TWO CIRCLE GLOBE IN 23 DAYS, 15 HOURS, 21 MINUTES

Mears and Collyer by Using Airplane and Ship Clip Nearly Five Days Off Old Record.

John H. Mears' own story of his record-breaking trip around the world will be found on page 15 of this edition.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, July 23.—John Henry Mears, theatrical producer and writer, and Capt. C. B. D. Collyer, flyer, today held the record for a circle of the globe—23 days, 15 hours, 21 minutes and 3 seconds. They broke the old record by four days and 23 hours. They stepped from an automobile at Battery Park last night at 8:21 o'clock, completing a journey by boat and airplane which they began from the same place the morning of June 29.

With them, barking enthusiasm, was a little Sealham terrier, named "Tailwind," who had sped with them over two oceans and three continents.

Last of Trip Through Fog. The last leg of their flight, from Minneapolis, they found one of the most difficult of the entire trip. They were forced to fight fog and low flying clouds for the last part of their flight, detouring by what aviators call the "scenic route" down the Susquehanna River to the Delaware River at Middletown, N. Y., where they cut across New Jersey to Miller Field, Staten Island.

Sweeping out of the mist in their Fairchild cabin monoplane, the City of New York, in which they had made all the air ports of their journey, they landed at 6:55 o'clock. The journey from Miller Field to the Battery was made by automobile and ferry.

By his trip Mears again became co-holder of the record for circling the globe, breaking that of Linton Wells and Edward Evans set in 1926. The Wells-Evans expedition had broken the record of 35 days which Mears set in 1912.

Started on Trip June 29. Mears, Collyer and their dog took off in a seaplane from the Battery June 29. Off Long Island they overtook the Olympic aboard which was their plane. Landing at Cherbourg, France, July 5, they flew across Europe and Asia in six days. From Tokyo they traveled by steamer to Victoria, B. C., landing there last Friday night. They flew from Victoria to Minneapolis and yesterday completed their journey.

"I feel happy," was the way Mears expressed his feelings as he

8-YEAR-OLD BOY RUNS AWAY FOR SIXTIETH TIME

Albert Lamb Has Kept Searching Parties Busy for Four Years.

Albert Lamb, 8 years old, has answered the call of the wanderlust again. For the sixtieth time in four years he trotted away from his home, at 1226 North Forty-ninth street, East St. Louis, last Thursday afternoon. Authorities would not be alarmed if he were not missing so long.

Previously Albert had never disappeared for more than 24 hours. Once he was found asleep on a door step in National City. Once he was picked up in Mitchell, Mo. A policeman found him in Belleville on his way to Scott Field. A year ago he was picked up in St. Louis when looking for Lindbergh. His father, Carter Lamb, a chauffeur, and his stepmother, do not know what to do about Albert. They have tried bribing, caoling and whipping. Once Mrs. Lamb promised him a dime if he would stay about the house all day. He collected the dime at 5 p. m. and promptly disappeared.

Thursday he was seen going east two blocks from home. He was wearing blue overalls, a brown-and-white striped shirt and tennis shoes. His hair is brown and curly.

FLYER KILLED IN BRITISH RACE FOR KING'S CUP

Body of London Barrister, Missing Since Friday, Found Beside Wrecked Plane.

By the Associated Press.
SELKIRK, Scotland, July 23.—The body of G. N. Warwick, one of the contestants in an airplane race around Great Britain, for the King's cup last week, was found by a shepherd in a lonely spot in the hills south of St. Mary's Loch today.

Warwick, a London barrister, had been unreported since he left Newcastle for Renfrew Friday, and dozens of planes, many motor cars and hundreds of searchers scoured the country between Renfrew and Newcastle in vain. Warwick's wife was among the searchers.

The barrister's body lay a short distance from his badly smashed machine. The spot is about 75 miles southeast of Renfrew.

SANTANDER, Spain, July 23.—Forced to battle against adverse winds the American yacht Atlantic in the New York-Santander race for the King's Cup was slowly approaching this port today. She is expected to dock within 24 hours. The Atlantic is owned by Gerard B. Lambert of St. Louis.

United States Ambassador Hammond today went aboard the American cruiser Detroit which arrived yesterday. The United States yacht Shenandoah has arrived from Nice to join the fleet that will welcome the competing yachts.

DRIVER HELD UP, ROBBED OF $1000 AT 16TH AND PINE

Three Men Board Truck of John Maurer Market Co. and Make Chauffeur Drive to Quiet Spot.

Fred Russell, delivery chauffeur for the John Maurer Market at 1525 Market street, was robbed of $1000 in cash by three men who hopped aboard his truck as he slowed up at Sixteenth and Pine streets at 10:30 o'clock this morning on the way to a downtown bank to deposit the funds for his employer.

Russell reported at the North Market street police station that the men, all of whom were armed, directed him to drive by a circuitous route to Ninth and Chambers street where they took the money. "Don't dare follow us," he said they told him. "If you do we'll have to kill you."

ABUSE OF PRIVATE CARS BROUGHT TO NOTICE OF I. C. C.

Commissioner McNamany Protests Against Free Hauling of Officers' Coaches.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 23.—The Interstate Commerce Commission was told today by Commissioner McNamany that abuses in the use of railroad-owned private passenger cars were common and extensive. He suggested new regulations to limit railroad expenditures in this field. He recommended that the commission forbid use of railroad-owned private cars for any other road except at regular charges, thus abolishing the system by which such cars are moved free when off their home lines. In a report McNamany declared the practice of transporting persons other than railroad employees in private passenger cars at the same rates charged passengers provided only with ordinary coach accommodations constituted an unjust discrimination and should be prohibited.

It was a general practice, McNamany said, for the wives, daughters and friends of railroad officers to use private cars to transport parties to and from pleasure resorts.

"During the last three years, the eight private cars of the New York, Chicago & St. Louis traveled 254,000 miles on foreign lines," the report said. "While foreign line cars traveled only 25,000 miles on that line."

LOSS ESTIMATED AT $150,000 IN STORAGE FIELD OF WHITE STAR CO.

Three 80,000-Gallon Containers and Three or Four of 20,000-Gallon Capacity Consumed.

SMOKE AND FLAMES SEEN 20 MILES AWAY

150 Men Work to Save $2,000,000 Refinery Threatened by Blaze Starting in Pool of Waste.

Burning fiercely for five hours and a quarter, a fire in the oil and gasoline tank storage field of the White Star Refinery, south of Wood River and east of Hartford, Ill., which threatened up to the time it was got under control, at 2:45 o'clock this afternoon, to spread over the whole $2,000,000 plant, caused thousands of dollars of damage.

No official estimate of the loss was available, nor could records be compiled before tonight, but refinery workmen estimated loss at $150,000 to $200,000, depending on the volume contained in destroyed tanks.

In the field of 20 tanks of oil and gasoline, three tanks of 80,000-barrel capacity each and three or four tanks of 20,000-barrel capacity each were burned. The exact number of the latter could not be determined for the time being in the confusion. Apparently crude oil was contained in all the tanks lost, though some might have been refined. Among the other tanks of 10,000 to 80,000-barrel capacity which were saved were one filled with a high-grade gasoline and another of "straight" gasoline.

At least two of the burned receptacles were relays for feeding the stills for cracking gasoline.

Two Men Reported Burned. Two employees of the refinery were reported to have been burned seriously, but confirmation of this was lacking.

Originating at 9:30 o'clock this morning on the oily surface of Grassy Lake, which curves around the 48-acre refinery grounds like a horseshoe, the conflagration slowly was forced back there by a crew of nearly 150 men, until at 2:45 o'clock the oily flames arose seemingly from the water. Hedged in by the patented chemical used as the principal extinguisher, the blaze continued harmlessly there for several hours more this afternoon.

The lake has been used as a dump for residue or waste oil. Even after being confined to the lake, the fire sent up a billowing cloud of smoke, shot through with flames.

Throughout the morning the fire was a spectacle visible as far away as downtown and midtown St. Louis, 20 miles southwest of the scene. There was a tremendous pillar of bluish-black smoke, within which flames of great heat leaped as high as 40 feet. The smoke was discernible from the upper windows of city skyscrapers and from McKinley and Merchants bridges.

Seen in St. Louis. Many St. Louisans saw the dark cloud without realizing what it was, while, strangely enough, no more than about 100 spectators at a time gathered at the various vantage points close to the refinery.

From an official source at the refinery it was learned that a spark from an Illinois Terminal System steam locomotive falling on the lake is thought to have started the fire. The blaze spread quickly into the tank field, and the tank became immediately one of saving the remainder of the establishment. During the morning, flames were within 50 feet of some of the equipment, but were turned aside. The effort was aided greatly by

ITALY TO INQUIRE IN ITALIA DISASTER, MUSOLINI SAYS

Premier Declares Proposal for Investigation by Any Other Nation Will Be Rejected Immediately.

ASSERTS JUDGMENT ON MEN MUST WAIT

Tribute Paid to Rescue Activities of Russian Crew, and to Memory of Dr. Finn Malmgren.

By the Associated Press. OSLO, Norway, July 23.—The Italian legation received a telegram today saying that the base ship Citta di Milano has left Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, for Narvik, Norway, with the Italian survivors.

It is expected that Noble and the other rescued members of the Italia will proceed by rail through Sweden in a special Italian coach, avoiding Stockholm. It is stated that no interviews whatever will be granted during the journey.

By the Associated Press. ROME, Italy, July 23.—Premier Mussolini told the Council of Ministers today that a complete investigation into all phases of the Italia disaster would be made by Italy and that any other proposed investigation would be rejected immediately.

Such inquiry, the Premier stressed, "will naturally be made in Italy and by Italian personalities. Any other hypothesis is absurd and offensive, and whatever it might be or wherever the proposition came from, it would immediately be rejected."

Meanwhile, he said, it should be recorded that the first to see the marooned group was Maj. Maddalena, the Italian flyer who went North with a Savoia-Marchetti machine.

The Premier added that the Council of Ministers would be interpreting the sentiments of the Italian people in thanking all those contributing to the rescue operations, especially the crew of the Russian icebreaker Krassin, and in paying homage to the memories of Dr. Finn Malmgren, Swedish meteorologist, and Vincenzo Pomella, motor attendant.

The Premier declared that definite judgment on the polar expedition must wait until "the drama arrived at its epilogue," but that meanwhile he wanted to "reiterate against unfair judgments against the men involved."

"They have shown their courage and their fiber and merit universal respect," he said.

The Premier then paid tribute to the brilliant flight of Ferrarin and Del Prete from Italy to South America as "having excited the nation's righteous pride."

Zappi Said to Have Had on Malmgren's Clothes When Rescued.

By the Associated Press. MOSCOW, July 23.—The correspondent of Tass, Soviet news agency, aboard the Russian icebreaker Krassin says that when Capt. Filippo Zappi was rescued by the Krassin he had clothes as well as a compass belonging to Dr. Finn Malmgren.

Zappi and his companion, Capt. Alberto Mariano, have been quoted as saying they left Dr. Malmgren dying in a grave of ice as they pressed on toward land to bring aid to the survivors of the Italia.

The Tass correspondent says that when Zappi came aboard the vessel he wore two pairs of pants, two suits of underwear and three pairs of socks, while Mariano had on one pair of pants, one suit of warm underwear and two pairs of socks.

He adds that Zappi refused to give up letters which Prof. F. Behounek, Czechoslovakian meteorologist, had entrusted to Malmgren before they started over the ice to send aid to Behounek and the others. He also refused to give up his notes.

The aviator Chukhnovsky discovered Zappi and Mariano on the ice and directed the Krassin to them.

ROME, July 23.—Greater care than seems to have been taken heretofore will be exercised when the Italian aircraft start searching for the tag of the Italia about 15 days hence. The Krassin will not be able to collaborate sooner, owing to the urgency of repairs.

Italian air authorities consider more caution needed owing to perilous landing conditions and the increasingly foggy weather as summer advances. All the Italian craft now in Arctic waters will work under the Krassin's direction.

The rescued survivors will proceed from Narvik to Italy by special train. Ceccioni's broken leg is healing normally, but Capt. Mariano's foot is causing a certain anxiety. After disembarking the survivors at Narvik, the Italia's base ship, the Citta di Milano, will return to King's Bay to act as the searching party's base again.

The searchers will be organized on information given by Capt. Zappi and Mariano, whose indications are by far the clearest.

Noble Eager to Aid in Further Rescue Work.

By the Associated Press. MOSCOW, July 23.—Gen. Umberto Noble is anxious to participate in further search for the six missing members of the Italia crew but is having difficulty in getting permission from the Italian Government, Prof. Samoilovich, head of the Russian rescue expedition aboard the Krassin today informed the rescue commission at Moscow.

The professor said that apparently Noble has fallen in the esteem of his Government. He added, however, that the Krassin would take Noble aboard for the further rescue work if requested.

Prof. Samoilovich said: "Replying to Noble's urgent request, I visited him as he could not leave his cabin because of his broken leg. I went aboard the base ship Citta di Milano, accompanied by Lieut. Viglieri, the Italia's navigator. Noble, crushed and nervous, asked permission to participate in the Krassin's further search."

"I told him that I had permission to take him aboard the Krassin, but Noble said that the Italian Government objects to his participation in the expedition. He therefore asks the Soviet Government to request the Italian Government to permit him to co-operate in the planned expeditionary work. I told Noble I would send his request to Moscow by radio."

The Citta di Milano gave a lunch in honor of the Krassin. There were no speeches and Noble failed to appear.

"Replying to Capt. Romagna, the Italian Government's local representative, whether we would take Noble aboard the Krassin, I said yes."

CALLES OUSTS LABOR MINISTER, BLAMED FOR OBREGON DEATH

we were entrusted by your friendship and confidence. We desire to leave you in complete liberty to take action."

The letter was signed by Morones and by Celestino Gassan, director of the National Federal Military Factories, and Eduardo Moneda, director of the national printing establishment. Calles did not make public the text of his acceptance of the three resignations.

Morones Leaves Capital.

Early Saturday morning while the public wrath against him was fermenting and it became apparent he would not be safe in the city, Morones fled. Today he was reported to have taken refuge in Santa Fe, a suburb of Mexico City, where he has assembled, the report says, a guard of 500 men. There were innumerable assertions that he would not be permitted to live the week out. From his refuge he issued a demand that Soto y Gama should be indicted for charging him with the assassination of Obregon.

In the meantime, the authorities are conducting a search for a man named Manuel Trejo, who is known to have been an associate of Morones and other labor leaders and has been mentioned as the link between the "intellectual assassins" and Jose de Leon Toral, the assassin slayer. Trejo is said to have ingratiated himself with a group of Catholic priests and through them to have made the acquaintance of Toral.

The Obregon leaders say he represented himself to Toral as a loyal Catholic, passionately desiring to "avenge the persecution" of the church, and prevailed upon Toral to make a martyr of himself in this cause. He is also said to have kept Toral posted on the whereabouts of Obregon and to have furnished him with the pistol with which he committed the murder.

So far the police are seeking a link in the evidence against the suspected "intellectual assassins" of the assassination, but are at a loss to do so. They admit they do not know whether he is hiding here in the Capital, or has fled toward the United States, or has been quietly murdered for the purpose of eliminating him from the case.

Got Pistol From Trejo.

The assassin is credited with the statement that the pistol was supplied him by Trejo. The pistol is not in the hands of Obregon's son, Umberto, who snatched it up when his father's body was brought to their house and ran off in search of Morones. He is not the only one who swore to kill Morones. Col. Topole, whose armed party in quest of the accused man and Gen. Francisco Manzo, military commander of the State of Sonora, and a life long friend of Obregon, headed still another Tuesday night and the following morning there were probably 100 armed Obregon followers searching the city for Morones, intending to kill him on sight.

All the time he was under guard, in his office, where he gave out a statement deploring the crime.

The relations between Morones and Obregon had long been openly hostile. On the night of April 30 Morones, in a public speech, called on Obregon, then a candidate for the presidency, to define his labor policy. This was taken as a challenge by Obregon, whose election was then a practical certainty, to name Morones as Secretary of Commerce, Industry and Labor in his new Cabinet or take the consequences.

Gen. Obregon retorted that he would try to get along without Morones' assistance. He then set out to organize an opposition labor union. This move was seen in labor circles as the beginning of a fight to the finish between the two men.

Morones' Assassination Forecast.

The Obregonists declared the Crom, as the Regional Confederation of Workers in Mexico is called, was seeing its last days. There were at that time predictions that Morones would not live longer than Dec. 1. A few days later a group of labor party followers tried to assassinate Obregon, but he escaped.

The special session of Congress, which is scheduled to begin July 23, will consider the general situation arising from Obregon's death and the highly complicated question of the presidential succession. Col. Topole indicated this evening, but will not take any action.

Topole does not think any direct action will be taken before the regular session of Congress, Sept. 1. Obregon will then be formally declared elected after the tally of votes which Congress is required to make. When he falls to appear to receive notification of his election, Congress will declare an emergency, and name a provisional President. There is also a strong possibility that Calles will be requested to continue in office.

Mexican Officials Reported in Conference on Obregon's Successor.

By the Associated Press. NOGALES, ARIZ., July 23.—High Mexican military and civil officials were reported in conference today at Nogales, Sonora, while the nature of the meeting was not definitely known, officials at Nogales, Sonora, believed that candidate for Provisional President to serve after the death of Obregon, President Calles' present term, would be selected.

Among those present at the conference were Gen. Manzo, Gov. Aron Saenz, Gov. Abelardo Rod-

HOLDS UP STEPHENSON'S PLEA

Attorney-General Fights "Dragon's" Move to Drop Mandamus.

By the Associated Press. LA PORTE, Ind., July 23.—A motion by counsel for David C. Stephenson, imprisoned former Klan dragon, to dismiss his suit for mandamus against the Warden of the State penitentiary, met objections from Attorney-General Arthur Gilliam when it was filed today in Circuit Court.

The judges allowed Gilliam until Thursday to prepare his objections based on a plea that the court should rule Stephenson could seek no further mandamus action.

Counsel for the former Indiana Klan "dragon," serving a life term for the murder of Madge Oberholzer, filed the mandamus action to force the Warden to allow Stephenson private interviews in prison with his attorneys. The interviews were granted last week, following the motion for dismissal.

Gilliam said he would proceed with his plans to go to the prison at Michigan City tomorrow and take depositions from Stephenson and other witnesses. The motion for dismissal was filed today.

FOUR MISSING IOWA YOUTHS CHANGED ROUTE IN WILDS

Letter From Iowa Student Says Party Would Not Be Heard From Until September.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., July 23.—The four University of Iowa students bound for the Arctic Circle in canoes may not be missing, as reported, according to word received by a Cedar Rapids newspaper man today from Max J. Kane of Iowa City, one of the explorers.

A press dispatch from Regina, Saskatchewan, Saturday night, said no word had been received from the youths, and it was feared they were lost. J. M. Cummings, a Hudson Bay post manager, at Du Brochet, said the party's equipment was in bad shape and that the boys had refused his advice to turn back.

Kane's letter, written July 5, to Du Brochet, mentioned Cummings' return to civilization, but said nothing about their equipment being damaged or lost, as reported by the trader. The boys were changing their course, he wrote, as they had found that if they went to Chesterfield Inlet, as planned, they would be forced to winter here. Instead, they headed for Nueltin Lake, from where they planned to travel east to Hudson Bay. One other white man took being carried to the shore, as reported by Kane at Du Brochet.

Kane declared that he and his friends would not be heard from again until September, as they would be traversing a dense wilderness. The radio received gado messages through arrangements with WGY, Schenectady. Besides Kane, Peder Boddum, Gordon Armstrong and John D. Fuller make up the group.

OUTDOOR ADVERTISING TRUST IS ALLEGED

Injunction Suit Begun by Department of Justice Against Nine Firms.

By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, July 23.—An injunction suit against the General Outdoor Advertising Co., Inc., and eight other defendants, alleging violation of the anti-trust law and specific acts in restraint of trade, was filed by the Federal Government here today.

The principal defendant is said to handle $75,000,000 worth of the $75,000,000 outdoor advertising business done annually in this country. The other defendants named in the action are: National Outdoor Advertising Bureau, Inc., Outdoor Advertising Association of America, Inc., Foster & Kleiser Co., Foster & Kleiser Investment Co., Kervin H. Fulton, George Johnson, George Arnsby and George W. Kleiser.

Fulton, president of the General Outdoor Advertising Co., said in a statement that the filing of the suit by the Department of Justice followed "an extended negotiation with the department concerning the possibility of a consent decree in equity."

"In the latter stages of this negotiation," the statement continued, "the department took the position that the company should be restricted as to certain activities necessary in the judgment of the company to the proper servicing of its clients for outdoor advertising made by the company with its advertiser clients. This company, realizing that the restrictions proposed by the department would render impracticable the delivery of satisfactory service to users of the medium and would seriously impair, if not destroy, the company's ability to sell the medium in volume sufficient to support the industry, has been unable to meet the terms which the department has sought to impose."

ADmits HE HID BODY IN TRUNK

Duluth (Minn.) Man Confesses Killing Farmer With Hammer.

DULUTH, Minn., July 23.—Police announced this afternoon they had obtained a confession from Andrew Loben that a body found by police in a barn today was that of Carl Johnson, whom Loben killed with a hammer in a quarrel last December.

The body was found when police went to the barn with Loben in an attempt to find stolen property. Unwillingness on the part of Loben prompted officers to start a systematic search, which ended when they found in a small trunk the parts of a man's body packed with sawdust. Loben had been living on Johnson's farm since the killing, he told police.

RAILROAD STRIKE IN INDIA

Casualties Reported Among Crews of Two Wrecked Trains.

MADRAS, India, July 23.—Further violence was reported today as a result of the strike of railroad employees in this district. The report said two passenger trains, manned by crews that replaced strikers, had been wrecked at Kodakanat and Tuticorin. Casualties were said to have resulted from both wrecks.

Police fired upon rioters at Mayavaram and at Tuticorin, Saturday. One man was killed at Tuticorin, and several persons, including policemen, were hurt. Rioters are accused of having damaged railroad stations, torn up rails and cut telegraph lines.

At the time the New Orleans Joint Traffic Bureau intervened with a petition asking that the commission forbid the transactions on the ground that the sale of the Orient to the Santa Fe would result in a combination of lines of railroad which are now competing.

The interests of shippers and the best service of the public demanded that the Orient line retain its present independent status.

New Orleans, petition said. Two other interventions presented in behalf of the Missouri Pacific and the Santa Fe, which lines did not ask that the sale be stopped, but urged that the commission require the Orient to maintain the present joint routes for handling traffic.

All the interventions were taken into consideration and the sale allowed to proceed.

W. T. Kemper, former president of the Orient and now its president, related the history of the successful endeavor during the last five years to keep the railroad in service. The Orient line would never be able to develop fully to the needs of its territory, Kemper said, unless it "found a banker," but as a portion of the Santa Fe system it would become a useful and profitable enterprise.

He declared the sale terms were fair and would result in a surplus of the which the Orient could pay off its $2,500,000 Government debt.

Chairman Gilmore lead the witness into a discussion of the existing situation, and Kemper agreed that in recent months the Orient had encountered a favorable increase in its traffic, especially in Texas.

HEARING BEGUN ON SALE OF OR

Head of Line Says Price Santa Fe Proposes to Pay Is Fair.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 23.—Consideration of the proposed purchase of the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railroad by the Atchafalaya, Topinka & Santa Fe System, was begun today at a joint hearing conducted by the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Texas Railroad Commission. Chairman Clarence Gilmore of the Texas Railroad Commission sat with Examiner N. C. Davis, representing the Federal agency as the evidence concerning the proposed transaction was taken.

The records relating to the Orient sale, incorporated in an opinion and contract taken by the Santa Fe, were put in preliminary to the calling of witnesses. The Santa Fe was shown to have agreed to pay $414,550 a share for the outstanding stock of the Orient line, which amounts to about 35,000 shares in return for which it would obtain 735 miles of railroad operating between Wichita, Kan., and Alpine, Tex. This was declared to represent a fair value for the property.

At the time the New Orleans Joint Traffic Bureau intervened with a petition asking that the commission forbid the transaction on the ground that the sale of the Orient to the Santa Fe would result in a combination of lines of railroad which are now competing. The interests of shippers and the best service of the public demanded that the Orient line retain its present independent status, the New Orleans Joint Traffic Bureau petitioned for an injunction to prevent the sale of the Missouri Pacific and Fort Worth & Denver lines did not ask that the sale be stopped, but urged that the commission require the Orient to maintain the present joint routes for handling traffic.

stepped from the plane. He and Collier were tanned from the sun and a bit spattered with oil from their engine, but otherwise appeared little the worse for their endurance testing moon race. Mears was born in Boston in 1880, the son of Timothy Mears, an art dealer. His boyhood heroes were the famous explorers, especially the globe circlers from Drake and Magellan to modern times, his favorite book Jules Verne's "Around the World in Eighty Days."

He came to New York when 18 years old to enter the theatrical business, first as a clerk in a theatrical office, later in Chicago as ticket taker and then manager of the Powers' Theater. In 1907 he became personal manager for John Drew and was associated with the famous actor until 1914. In 1909 he drove one of the first automobiles ever seen in Chicago, a gas buggy of his own contraption, but was chased from the Chicago boulevards as a menace to public safety.

Collier Old Air Mail Flyer.

Collier was born at Nashville, Tenn., in 1896. He started his globe trotting career at the age of two months when he traveled with his parents from Tennessee to Korea. His father, the Rev. Dr. C. T. Collier of Baltimore at that time was engaged in geographic research in the far East. Collier entered the air service of the United States Army in 1917 but his quick proficiency doomed him to stay on this side during the war as an instructor. He left the service in 1919 to buy an interest in two flying circuses and tour the country. From 1920 to 1923 he was in the air mail service, flying the New York to Cleveland route. He was one of the first flyers in this country and one of the five founders of the Quiet Birdmen, the secret organization of noted flyers of which Lindbergh, Chamberlin, Byrd and others are members. He is president of the Aviation Service Corporation of New York, aeronautical engineering, brokerage and exporting organization.

A stunt of his which attracted much attention at the time was a flight from New York to Washington in 1926 in a giant Sikorsky plane with two baby grand pianos and six passengers for ballast.

POLICE CAPTURE TWO WHO ROBBED SALINA, OK., BANK

St. Louis Officers Surround House at 2640 Park and Seize M. C. Williams and Leonard Burton.

Two bank robbers wanted for a $2500 holdup last Thursday at Salina, Ok., were arrested at 2640 Park avenue this morning after a party composed of three Oklahoma peace officers and 16 detectives had surrounded the house in anticipation of a fight.

The two men, however, were surprised in their beds and submitted to arrest tamely enough. They are Marion C. Williams, 27 years old, of Vinita, Ok., and Leonard Burton, 33, of Siloam Springs, Ark. Both men admitted the charges against them, police said, Williams adding that he was responsible for three other bank robberies. At an Ironton, Mo., bank, on Dec. 23, 1927, he declared, he obtained almost $10,000 single-handed; at Leeterville, Mo., in the summer of 1926, he and two other men obtained $2000, and at Pedigo, Ark., in February, 1926, he and two other men obtained $1400. In the last six months, he said, he had bought six automobiles and spent the remainder of his loot on other luxuries.

Barton's brother, Roosevelt, 30, was arrested at his home Friday and gave Oklahoma officers the information on which they sought the other two in St. Louis.

Both Williams and Barton admitted after their arrest that they had been in the Salina bank robbery. Williams said he had been in the Salina bank robbery, the president with pistols while Williams scooped up the money in the cages. Under fire, which Williams returned, they drove their stolen automobile to the edge of town, transferred to another stolen automobile and drove to Siloam Springs, where the money was divided and Leonard and Williams started for St. Louis.

Roosevelt, however, was arrested at his home after Sheriff C. M. Kelly of Pryor and A. B. Cooper of J. A. Brown of the State Bureau of Criminal Identification had traced him to the Arkansas town. Roosevelt said he was sure the pair would go to the home of a relative in St. Louis. Kelly, Cooper and Brown enlisted the aid of Lieut. Mulcahy and his men in surrounding the place, which proved to be the Park avenue address.

Anxious to capture the men with the least possible trouble, the Oklahoma officers booby-trapped the place. Roosevelt, however, was arrested at his home after Sheriff C. M. Kelly of Pryor and A. B. Cooper of J. A. Brown of the State Bureau of Criminal Identification had traced him to the Arkansas town. Roosevelt said he was sure the pair would go to the home of a relative in St. Louis.

Kelly, Cooper and Brown enlisted the aid of Lieut. Mulcahy and his men in surrounding the place, which proved to be the Park avenue address.

MAN FORMALLY CHARGED WITH BOMB MURDER

Paul Reed, 24, Accused of Killing Former Sweetheart's Husband by Putting Explosive in Auto.

By the Associated Press.
ROCKFORD, Ill., July 23.—Formal charges of murder were filed today against Paul Reed, 24-year-old draughtsman, accusing him of the killing of Vernon Plager, Rockford radio man, with a bomb which exploded in Plager's automobile last Thursday. The bomb had been wired to the starter.

The complaint was filed by State's Attorney W. D. Knight. A Coroner's jury previously had recommended that Reed be held for action by the county grand jury. Knight's action followed the filing of affidavits made by Reed's brother, Arthur, and his nephew, Kenneth, alleging Reed had endeavored to obtain explosives last week before Plager was slain. Reed maintained silence, saying his attorney had advised him not to talk.

Reed was linked with the killing after police recalled that he and Mrs. Iva Plager, the slain man's widow, once had been Reed's sweetheart. Mrs. Plager was held as a suspect but no charges have been filed against her.

Wild Train Injures Four.

Ten freight cars were destroyed by fire when tank cars burst into flame at the instant of the crash.

ONCE upon a time,

there lived a poor, struggling young artist...and his equally young, poor and struggling wife! They lived in a remote corner of the town...and they had a remote look in their eyes, as though they'd about come to the conclusion that life really wasn't such a lark, anyway!

But that was once upon a time...and its all

And this is how it all came about...

"Alicia and I were pretty down-in-the-mouth"...Philip said. "We were so all-fired fed-up with that dingy little apartment...and so bored with life that we hated everything and everybody! Of course, that discontent showed in my work...and I wasn't making much money."

Earthquake Recorded in St. Louis.

Earth shocks of moderate intensity approximately 1720 miles south of St. Louis were recorded on the St. Louis University seismograph yesterday. Starting at about 1:25 p. m., the tremors continued for more than an hour. The Rev. James P. Macelwaine, director of the station, said the shocks probably centered off the coast of Mexico, where severe shocks occurred recently.

Ship Runs Into Water Spouts on Lake Michigan

Yacht on Archeological Expedition Nearly Wrecked by Rare Occurrence—Triple Rainbow Appears After Fierce Storm.

By the Associated Press.
STURGEON BAY, Wis., July 23.—Three water spouts on a triple rainbow nearly spelled disaster to the yacht Naroca of the Isle Royal Archeological expedition, it was learned today in a dispatch to the Associated Press from Commander Eugene F. MacDonald, Polar explorer.

The commander of the Naroca reported late Sunday, while on Lake Michigan five miles northeast of Sheboygan, "in the van of a storm of unusual darkness and intensity with a 50-mile wind, the three water spouts whirled down simultaneously upon the yacht, one to the port bow, one to the starboard and a third dead ahead."

"Two of them crossed the Naroca's bow at a distance of 400 yards, the third moved southward and disappeared. They were 100 feet or more in diameter and the water was thrown several hundred feet high."

"A triple rainbow was observed shortly after the storm began to clear."

Water Spouts Are Rare.

"Water spouts in the Great Lakes region are rare. In the 53 years of service on these waters, Capt. J. B. Elingens of the Naroca has seen only one and that was in the same vicinity."

Other members of the Isle Royal expedition who saw the phenomena were George R. Fox of the Warren Museum of Michigan, an expert specializing in the Great Lakes region; Dr. Tiving W. La Forge of Chicago, and Prof. Baker Brownell of Northwestern University. None of them, with the exception of Elingens, had ever seen water spouts on the Great Lakes before.

"The storm which came up suddenly from the north was the darkest and kicked up the quickest sea I have ever seen on the lakes," said MacDonald. "While the Naroca played into the teeth of the storm, the water spouts were moving down through these tunnels of wind. The spouts advanced for several miles and about 4:30 p. m. dwindled and disappeared."

Triple Rainbow.

"A triple rainbow appeared in the Eastern sky as the storm moved southward. The inner bow of the rainbow showed a double spectrum. This could be observed from Sheboygan. Multiple rainbows of this sort are in themselves a rare occurrence."

"Because the Isle Royal expedition contemplates opening ancient graves when it begins in the northern Lake Superior region, two sailors on the Naroca believing that such activities bring misfortune and bad luck asked to leave the ship at Sturgeon Bay. The sight of the water spouts, the escape of the ship and the triple rainbow appearing soon after convinced them that luck would be with the expedition after all and they have asked to stay on board."

NEW YORK, July 23.—Attempts

of police to arrest a Negro in Harlem last night resulted in rioting in which four policemen were injured. Reserves from two precincts and a riot squad with rifles were subjected to a barrage of bullets, bricks, garbage, broken furniture and bottles from house tops for nearly half an hour before the riot was quelled.

Patrolman Charles Kubiel was injured internally and cut and bruised. Patrolmen Samuel McFadden and Irwin Young suffered fractures of their right hands when they struggled against the mob, and Patrolman Herman de Stella was kicked and beaten and his right eye and head were bruised. Only Kubiel remained at the hospital.

In the same hospital a Negro, said to be Clarence Donald, 36 years old, who police said started the trouble by invading with two other Negroes an apartment, was held on a charge of assault.

Capt. Burnell telephoned a riot

call to police headquarters and the Harlem emergency squad truck was sent with 20 patrolmen, armed with rifles. The mob surged back and forth across Lenox avenue, denouncing the police and blocking the progress of heavy motor traffic.

As the policemen sprang from their truck and swung into the milling crowd, the barrage descended from the house tops. Then came a fusillade of bullets. When the police raised their rifles into position against the rioters on the roofs, the latter disappeared.

Then after a struggle with the mob the street was cleared. It was the first serious trouble police have faced in Harlem's Negro section in many years. Fearful an outbreak of trouble, Capt. Burnell left five policemen on duty on the block for the night.

FIVE DRY RAIDS MADE IN ST. LOUIS COUNTY

Beer Found in Three Bars—Two Women Ordered to Give Bond.

Although St. Louis County bootlegging resorts had been reported to be operating secretly during the session of the special grand jury, prohibition agents seized and destroyed homebrew in every one of five raids Saturday night.

At Woodlawn Inn, on Manchester road east of Denny road, they destroyed 30 cases and arrested Dan Eling, the bartender. Eling named another man as proprietor of the place and said the owner of the building was Constable Louis Holman of Bonhomme Township. The door of the bar at 1133 Sutter avenue was slammed when the agents made their appearance and as they chopped it down they heard the crash of breaking glass inside. They arrested Aitaldo Gidrozzi, proprietor, and seized six bottles of beer which had escaped destruction.

Other objectives were: A bar at Manchester and Kiefer Creek roads, where Arthur Murray, proprietor, was arrested; a grocery store at 5300 Janet avenue, where Mrs. Frances Loskoeki was ordered to report later at the Federal Building to give bond, and a bar at 5457 Janet, where the woman proprietor, Mrs. Ruth Burger, got the same instruction.

Hotel Guest Found Poisoned. Samuel Klein was taken to City Hospital early today from his room in a hotel at Fifteenth and Chestnut streets, suffering from food poisoning, the source of which physicians have been unable to trace.

TONY FOLEY'S BROTHER, INDICTED, SURRENDERS

Paul Foley and John McGuire, Gambling House Employees, Appear at Clayton.

Paul Foley, 715A Interdrive, University City, brother of Tony Foley, gambling house proprietor, and John McGuire, 5036 Northland avenue, surrendered at Clayton today under indictments returned against them on gambling charges in connection with the operation of Tony Foley's gambling houses in St. Louis County. They gave bond.

A third man, Leslie Berry, 38 years old, of 8350 Manchester road, charged with operating a crap game in Brentwood, was arrested upon a warrant today based on his indictment. He was held under $10,000 bond. The arrest of Berry, the two Foley brothers and McGuire leaves at large only the mysterious "Charles M. Black," whose name was signed to checks signed on behalf of the Los Angeles Club, Tony Foley's resort.

The special grand jury investigating graft and reported official protection of lawlessness in the county has returned eight indictments to date. Seven of the persons named have surrendered. One defendant, whose name is withheld, remains to be apprehended.

Paul Foley and McGuire were employed at Foley's gambling house in Wellston and also at Foley's Los Angeles Club, on Manchester road. When they surrendered today Paul Foley gave his age as 34 and occupation as clerk. McGuire gave his age as 47 and occupation as real estate dealer.

SWIMMER KILLED IN DIVE AGAINST SNAG

Body of Stephen Fruehwirth Jr. Is Taken From Meramec Three Hours Later.

Striking his head on an underwater snag as he dived from the south bank of the Meramec River near Sullivan, Mo., Stephen Fruehwirth Jr., 20-year-old son of a contractor living at 3555 Oriole avenue, was instantly killed Saturday.

Investigation by a coroner's jury after the finding of the body about 4 p. m. showed that a sharply broken branch of a submerged log had pierced the youth's skull, a fatal death. His body apparently twisted free from the snag and was carried downstream by the current a distance of about 50 feet.

Fruehwirth's father and mother, with several other members of the family, were encamped on the river about half a mile away. Fruehwirth and some companions had gone into the water and had worked their way downstream. He had been playing in the water on the north side of the water, but finding it too shallow for diving, had swum to the other side.

The bank is about five feet above the water at this point, the water being about four feet deep. Fruehwirth made several dives and was watched admiringly from the other side of the river. The bathers there saw him flip gracefully into the water a last time and noted that his body failed to rise. They called for help and a search was made. The body was not found for three hours.

Fruehwirth is survived by his parents, four brothers and three sisters.

SMITH URGED TO MAKE EIGHT-WEEK CAMPAIGN

Democratic Nominee Undecided When He Will Take Stump.

By the Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 23.—Gov. Smith is being urged by some of his political advisers to pack the punch of his presidential campaign into the eight weeks preceding the election. In this way, they figure, he can beat build up to a climax just before the voting early in November.

The Democratic nominee has reached no decision when he should take to the road, where he should go, or how many speeches he should deliver. He is revolving in his mind the varied advice that comes from lieutenants, including those who think he should take to the stump by Labor day at the latest. It probably will be a month or more before his speech-making plans are disclosed.

The Governor has told friends, however, that he doesn't intend to make more than one speech a day, and he is considering the advisability of not even doing that. A limited number of addresses, all to be broadcast by radio, in strategic centers is a program to which he is giving serious thought.

Although there is a plan on foot to have him speak at a monster outdoor rally in Chicago during the campaign, Smith will insist, wherever possible, on speaking indoors, chiefly to conserve his voice. He never has done much campaigning from the rear of his train, as he believes this method in effective, considering the physical exertion, although he intends while traveling during the coming campaign to appear at all station stops for informal greetings with the public.

Until after his notification the week of August 19, the Democratic presidential nominee will do no campaigning. A few days after his acceptance speech here, he plans to attend a Democratic rally at Seagriff, N. J., and undoubtedly will make an address.

Invited to Ohio Convention. The Governor has been invited to attend the Ohio Democratic State convention late in August, as John W. Davis did in 1924, but because of the lateness of his notification ceremony it is unlikely that he will go into Ohio at that time.

If he should adopt an eight week speaking schedule, Smith would have opportunity to get some rest just before he starts stumping the week after Labor day. He is expected to invade New England for several speeches, and to cover the North Atlantic seaboard, and the middle West thoroughly.

Also, it is the nominee's intention to go into some of the border states and to deliver some speeches in the West. Although there is doubt whether he will be able to go to the Pacific Coast, he is understood to be anxious to deliver at least one address in the Northwest, and he is being advised by some of his managers to go into the South—something Democratic presidential nominees in the past rarely have done.

Memphis Industrial Capital of the Mid-South

is an expression that takes on new meaning since natural gas has been assured within a year for every fuel demand in manufacturing and heating. Aside from being the metropolitan center of the richest agricultural area on the North American continent, Memphis is the center of the world's hardwood lumber market, and is the largest inland cotton market in the world.

Cheap fuel, a plentiful labor supply, proximity to abundant raw materials, and unsurpassed transportation facilities are factors expected to bring to Memphis within the next five years a solid, substantial industrial growth unsurpassed in the City's history, or in the history of any other southern city. A population of 300,000 in five years is the foregone conclusion of coldly analytical business men.

Memphis is the distribution center for a vastly rich territory in the very heart of the South. As development of this territory advances, business houses are expanding to care for the added volume of business. The city is the largest wholesale grocery center of the South. It ranks third among the drug and chemical markets of the world. Every need of the southern merchant can be filled in the Memphis market.

Memphis is a good city in which to live. Its climate compares favorably with that of other southern cities. It has the largest artesian water plant in the world. Its educational facilities are of the best. Organized recreational and social activities, (golf etc.) assure citizens and visitors of ample diversion from business cares.

400,000 IN PARADE AT SCHUBERT FESTIVAL

Vienna Procession, 10 Miles Long, Takes Seven Hours to Pass.

By the Associated Press.
 VIENNA, July 23.—Led by a delegation of German-American singers, 400,000 Germans, Austrians, Czechoslovaks, Rumanians, Poles and Scandinavians marched yesterday in a parade along the famous Ringstrasse in honor of the memory of Franz Schubert, noted composer.
 Gigantic floats carrying hogheads of beer supplied liquid refreshment to those who wilted under the burning sun. It required seven hours for the parade to pass the reviewing stand in which Chancellor Seipel, President Hainisch and United States Minister Albert M. Washburn were prominent figures. The French Minister, on instructions from his Government, absented himself from the demonstration which is regarded by France as a move toward the absorption of Austria by Germany.

500,000 Witness Parade.
 From the beginning to the end of the parade, there were marked manifestations in favor of a union between Germany and Austria. Not once, so far as could be learned, was the Austrian national hymn sung, the marchers confining themselves to "Deutschland, Deutschland Ueber Alles," "Die Wacht Am Rhein," and "Vaterland," in which 500,000 spectators joined with vigor.

Dressed in ancient and modern costumes, and carrying banners of rich silk embroidered in gold, the marchers in a 10-mile long stream presented a pageant of color and animation seldom equaled in Europe.

A group of old-time troubadours, minstrels, bards and meistersingers in resplendent attire gave a romantic touch to the spectacle.

Champion of Union.
 The most eloquent champion of the union movement has been Paul Loebe, president of the German Reichstag, who represents the German people and Government at the Schubert festivities.

"Two million Viennese have proclaimed spontaneously the wish for annexation by Germany," Dr. Loebe declared. "This is a warning to foreigners and opponents of reunion who must know that, if Austria and Germany are two separate states, it is due to the opposition. Can you stifle the instinctive desires of 70,000,000 people? This is impossible. Austria and Germany will be united."

"Let us raise our glasses to the great German republic of the future, incorporating not only 60,000,000 Germans, but 6,000,000 Austrians. When we return home we will tell our people we have not been in a foreign country, for Austria is a fatherland to every German, a land where we are one people, one race and one state."

Allied Representatives Absent.
 Comment has been aroused in German circles by the apparently studied absence throughout the ceremonies of representatives of the Allied Powers. At a state banquet last night only one foreign diplomat was present, the Japanese Minister, although all the others had been invited.

Last week the French Minister called upon the Austrian Foreign Office and said he had been instructed to stay away from Vienna while the Schubert celebration was in progress because it was being turned into a demonstration in favor of an Austro-German union, to which the French Government was firmly opposed.

BRUNO, ARK., INLAND TOWN, GETS NEW TRAFFIC OUTLET

County Road Now Intersects With State Highway; Yellville Shipping Point.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
 ST. JOE, Ark., July 23.—The completion of a new county road intersecting a State highway, recently completed under the direction of Judge R. B. Berry, has opened a new outlet to the markets for Bruno, an inland town in the mountains of Marion County, eight miles north of here. The new railroad point for Bruno now is Yellville. For many years all freight to and from Bruno has been hauled over a ridge road to Everton, on the Missouri & North Arkansas Railroad. The round trip on this road occupied half a day for a motor truck, or a long day's drive for a mule team. Now the new road gives an excellent automobile highway between Bruno and Yellville, and trucks are making the round trip daily in two hours.

As Bruno is near many zinc and lead mines and also is the center of a large timbered area, it is expected that there will be a business revival in these industries, due to the cheapening of the ore and timber hauls.

Also considerable tourist travel is being routed by Bruno since the opening of the road. Between Bruno and Yellville on this road are located two of the largest and coldest springs in the hills, one at Big Springs and one near Bruno. Both these springs have a large flow and are the center of scenic attractions which make ideal camping spots.

Boy Dies From Bruise on Foot.
 LITTLE ROCK, Ark., July 23.—Floyd Goff, 14-year-old son of State Senator J. O. Goff, died at a hospital here Friday from blood poisoning, the result of a bruise on his foot, received about 10 days ago. The body was taken back to Newport for burial.

HOOVER TO CONFER

WITH HIRAM JOHNSON

Republican Nominee and California Senator Interested in Boulder Dam Issue.

By the Associated Press.

PALO ALTO, Cal., July 23.—Resuming his conferences with Republican political leaders of California, Herbert Hoover today had invited Senator Hiram Johnson to his home on Stanford University campus for luncheon and a discussion of the general situation afterwards.

The senior California Senator is up for re-election this year and expects to conduct a vigorous campaign in which national and State leaders look to him materially to assist the Hoover-Curtis ticket.

While Senator Johnson long has been identified with the so-called progressive wing of the party and has stood against some of the issues which the Republican presidential nominee has supported in the past, it is stated that he and his followers are united with the more conservative elements in their support of a Californian for the presidency.

One chief point of contact between the nominee and the Senator is the Boulder Canyon Dam issue. Secretary Hoover assisted in negotiating the seven-State compact and has been an ardent supporter of the legislation. Senator Johnson is co-author of the Boulder Dam bill which will be the unfinished business of the Senate at the convening of the next session.

Besides Senator Johnson, Hoover also had an appointment today with Albert Ottinger, Attorney-General of New York State and a probable candidate for Governor of New York on the Republican ticket. From him the Republican standard bearer hoped to get a close-up view of the political situation in the Empire State.

BARS WRITING NAMES ON PRIMARY BALLOT

Attorney-General Rules on Case Involving Late Judge Graves' Post.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, July 23.—A nomination for an office at a primary election cannot be made by writing in the name of the candidate favored by the voter in the case no candidate has formally filed for that office, Attorney-General Shartel rules in an opinion issued today.

The ruling is expected to block a reported move to prevent the Democratic State Committee from selecting a candidate for State Supreme Judge to fill a vacancy on the Democratic State ticket caused by the death of Supreme Judge W. W. Graves, who was the only candidate who had filed for the Democratic nomination.

It has been rumored that one of the candidates for the vacancy has been carrying on a quiet campaign to have his friends write in his name on the Democratic ballot, then claim the nomination even though the number of votes for him would be small compared to the total cast.

There has been considerable doubt concerning the law covering the case, and the matter may be carried to the Supreme Court, despite the ruling of the Attorney-General.

Judge Graves died June 17. The period fixed by law for filing formal declarations of candidacy for party nominations expired June 7. The election law provides that where a vacancy exists in the ticket of a political party, through death, withdrawal, failure of a candidate to file, or due to other reasons, the vacancy shall be filled by the party committee after the primary election. A vacancy on the State ticket is filled by the State Committee.

The general election law differs from the primary election law, in that the writing in of names of candidates for office in a general election is legal. However, this law does not apply to the primary election.

Nearly 20 Democratic attorneys have been mentioned for selection by the State Committee to fill the vacancy. Among them: Judge George Ellison of Maryville, one of the six commissioners of the State Supreme Court; Judge John H. Bradley of the Springfield Court of Appeals; Myers Campbell of Kirksville; Circuit Judge Charles L. Henson of Mount Vernon, Robert Ward of Caruthersville, and L. Graves of Kansas City, a son of the late Judge W. W. Graves. Shartel's opinion, issued to Prosecuting Attorney J. A. Walden of Randolph County, held the County Clerk of Randolph County was in error in preparing a Democratic ballot with a blank line under the name of the late Judge Graves, on which the voter might write in a name. The opinion said Judge Graves was the only candidate who had filed for the Democratic nomination, and that since his death there was no legal candidate for the nomination in the primary election. In the circumstances the office should be left off the ballot, and the vacancy filled later by the State Committee, Shartel said.

FALL REPORTED TO HAVE SOLD THREE RIVERS RANCH

DENVER, July 23.—The Denver Post says that the Albert B. Fall ranch at Three Rivers, N. M., was acquired under contract of purchase by Saturday. Clay Mann, Texas cattle man, who announced the deal in Denver. The deal will net the former Secretary of the Interior $300,000, the newspaper will quote Mann, acting for the Empire Sheep and Land Co., as saying. The company expects to take possession in November. The ranch covers parts of three New Mexico counties—Lincoln, Socorro and Otero.

While negotiations have been on for some time, the Post story quotes Mann, "Mr. Fall did not sign any papers until Saturday." Fall decided to sell the ranch, according to the newspaper account, because managing it was too strenuous and, again, partly on account of the recent death of a son.

POPLAR BLUFF BANK CLOSES BECAUSE OF 'FROZEN' ASSETS

By the Associated Press.
POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., July 23.—The Poplar Bluff Trust Co., which had total resources of about $250,000 and deposits of approximately $125,000, failed to open its doors this morning. Duncan, a state bank examiner, is in charge. Reorganization of the bank, chartered Jan. 2, 1918, probably will be effected within a week. C. R. Coleman is president and James Henson, cashier.

AIRPORT BONDS URGED ON FACTORY WORKERS

Votes for Issue to Be Sought Through Posters and Pamphlets.

Having launched a campaign in the luncheon clubs for passage of the $2,000,000 airport bond issue proposal to be submitted to the voters Aug. 7, the Municipal Airport Bond Issue Committee today carried its message to voters in the factories.

Large posters advertising the bond issue will be placed in the manufacturing plants and pamphlets setting forth the need for an airport will be distributed among the workers.

The Central Trades and Labor Union endorsed the airport plan at its meeting yesterday. "Airport Day" will be observed by the Advertising Club tomorrow with a luncheon at Hotel Statler at which Edwin B. Melsner, chairman of the airport committee, will be the principal speaker. Officers from Scott Field and flying firm executives from Lambert-St. Louis Field and the airport have been invited to attend.

Airplanes from Lambert-St. Louis Field flew over the city yesterday at noon, dropping cards advertising the bond issue.

BARON HUENFELD GETS BIG OVATION FOR MONARCHIST PLAY

Newspapers, However, Censures Atlantic Flyer for Visit to Former Kaiser.

By the Associated Press. DRESDEN, Germany, July 23.—Baron von Huenefeld, who crossed the Atlantic in the German airplane Bremen, was hailed as a successful playwright last night with the premiere of his play "Die Furcht vor Dem Glueck" ("The Fear of Luck").

The flying author received a warm ovation, gave many curtain calls and was literally swamped with flowers.

The play propounds the question of whether the work of a creative artist is most fruitful under luck or the deepest misfortune, and compares Paris under the Bourbons, King Louis Philippe, and during the reign of the Bourbons to the advantage of the latter.

The newspaper "Welt Am Montag" chides the Baron for his monarchical reflections and says "his insinuations concerning present conditions are just as wishy washy and involved as the author's actions in flying to Doorn one day and to the grave of President Ebert the next."

COTTON BELT SEEKS PERMISSION TO BUY THREE SMALL ROADS

Purpose is to Obtain Direct Line Into Blytheville, Ark., by Way of Malden, Mo.

Seeking to obtain a direct line into Blytheville, Ark., by way of Malden, Mo., which is on its main line, the Cotton Belt Railway has applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to buy outright three intervening small independent railroads in Missouri and Arkansas. They are the Gideon & North Island, the Deering Southwestern and the Blytheville, Leachville & Arkansas Southern 4000.

The Cotton Belt would have to build an 18-mile connection between the first two roads, to carry out its project, and an 11-mile extension of the third line. The road would go by way of Caruthersville, Mo. The distance from Malden to Blytheville is about 50 miles.

For the purchase, the Cotton Belt has offered to pay $300 shares of its common stock at par, or $300,000, giving the Gideon & North Island 800 shares, the Deering Southwestern 3500 and the Blytheville, Leachville & Arkansas Southern 4000.

Open Date For Cardinals

TODAY is an open date in the National League sched- ule for the Cardinals. They open a series at Brooklyn to- morrow.

KAISER AND FLANNIGAN TO BOX HERE AUG. 1

Johnny "FeeWee" Kaiser, local featherweight, and Patsy Flannigan, formerly of St. Louis but who for the past few years has been fighting in Chicago and on the West Coast, have signed for a 10-round bout on Billy Maloney's card at the Missouri Arena, Aug. 1. They will fight at 128 pounds.

Kaiser, in his last bout, won the decision over Jackie Sanders at West Frankfort, Ill., July 16. Ac- cording to ringsters the local boy was kept from a knockout victory because he hurt his punching hand early in the bout.

Flannigan was a popular favorite in St. Louis almost 10 years ago. He earned a reputation as a boxer but when he left here he had not developed a knockout punch.

Osner Also on Card. Another St. Louisian who recently returned from a ring campaign in other fields who will appear on the card is Frankie Osner. He is scheduled to meet Frank Ford of Waco, Tex. Osner was held to a draw by Tommy O. Laughlin, July 4, at Herrin, Ill.

Matchmaker Maloney expects to sign two heavyweights for the third 10-round bout on the card. One six and one four-round preliminary probably will round out the pro- gram.

Tickets for the fight are on sale at the Business Men's Gymnasium, the National Gymnasium and Ben Garavelli's.

Harry Sharpe and Walter H. Sner will referee.

REGATTA PRIZES TO BE AWARDED TONIGHT

The Meramec Motor Boat Club of St. Louis, comprised of owners of outboard motor boats, will meet at a banquet at the Coronado Hotel tonight at 8 o'clock. Trophies and cash prizes will be awarded to the winners of races in yesterday's regatta at Crowe Coeur Lake.

Arrangements will probably be made to hold another regatta at the lake next Sunday while the owners have their boats there.

It's Getting Easy.

Two holes-in-one were made at the Westborough Country Club here last week. Samuel Marx made the second one yester- day on the fourth hole, which is 210 yards long. Charles Sorg Jr., a visitor from Dallas, Tex., made the other on No. 16 of the same course last Wednesday. No less than 10 aces have been recorded on local courses this season.

U. S. OLYMPIC TEAMS ON FINAL TRAINING LAP

By the Associated Press.

AMSTERDAM, Holland, July 23.—The American Olympic teams to- day began their final week of training in the same fine weather which has greeted them ever since the President Roosevelt left Amer- ica nearly two weeks ago. Double workouts daily will be held until midweek when the track and field men who compete early next week will taper off.

The marathon squad was out early this morning for their 18- mile jog along the flat course they will follow in actual competition against the world's best distance aces during the games. Joie Ray, the converted miller, appeared par- ticularly strong. The confident Chicagoan is up to his natural weight and is in high spirits.

Oarsmen Ready for Tests.

The rowers are ready for speed tests at Sloten. Major-General Douglas MacArthur of Baltimore, president of the American Olympic Committee, yesterday traversed the crew course and returned to the Roosevelt enthusiastic about it and excited as a boy over the showing of the big University of California eight.

"It's the finest crew I've ever seen anywhere in the world," he exclaimed. "Every man is magnifi- cent in power and steadiness."

A shower during the night alarmed coaches who fear the stadium track won't be ready in time, but it was of less than an hour's duration.

This morning the Dutch press hails Kreisman, who at the eleventh hour was called from Sweden, to finish engineering work at the stadium as the "savior of the clid- der track and Dutch honor."

U. S. Boxers Work Out.

Hilversum has become an inter- national center for equestrian com- petitors just as Sloten has for oars- men. The horsemen of twenty na- tions in the uniforms of most of the armies of the world are putting their mounts through intensive training.

Numerous towns and villages in the vicinity of Amsterdam have be- come training centers for various sports. The Dutch boxers, for in- stance, have gone into training at Edam—where the cheese comes from. American boxers worked out as usual aboard the Roosevelt yester- day, but the Dutch did not be- cause Sunday sports are frowned upon in puritanical Holland. No public exhibitions of boxing are permitted in this country. It's only by special dispensation of the au- thorities that the Olympic boxing hall was erected and the interna- tional bouts permitted.

CHALLENGER IS MASTERED AND PUTS UP POOR EXHIBITION

By Charles W. Dunkley.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

FAIRHAVEN, N. J., July 22.—

Jack Dempsey has come, gone and conquered again—conquered the hearts of upwards of 2000 spectators who flocked to Tom Heene-y's training camp yesterday,

turning the occasion into one of the greatest tributes ever paid this man's great fighter.

In the scramble to pay homage to the man Gene Tunney twice defeated, Heene, challenger for the world's heavyweight championship,

was completely overlooked, Dempsey unwillingly stole all the thunder.

Presumably, the crowd was sent to watch Heene in action,

but it was Dempsey, the defended one, who got the glory.

Heene, for the time being, was forgotten.

Perhaps the reception Dempsey received on Heene's nerves, for his showing in four rounds of boxing with the Manassa Mauler

was anything but impressive.

Nevertheless, Dempsey, after the word, said the New Zealander

did better than an even chance of winning from Tunney when they met in their title match in the Yankee Stadium next Thursday night.

"He Has Good Chance to Win."

He can take a punch, and he can give one," Dempsey said.

When a man can do these two things, why, he always has a chance. Heene is rugged and strong, with plenty of stamina."

The critics were unanimous today that Heene's showing was the worst he has displayed since he started training. He was trying to be impressive because of the appearance of Dempsey, Promoter

Tex Rickard, millionaire, society

matron, debutante, present champion and former titleholder of the ring who crowded around the outdoor ring.

But neither James J. Braddock

nor James J. Lawless, his two sparring mates, had any trouble in beating Heene, who was slow

in his first two rounds with Brad-

hands and right crosses. Against

Lawless, Heene got warmed up and showed better. He slipped in the center of the ring, with Lawless getting the better of the exchange.

Heene's handlers explained that he was under a nervous strain, because of the celebrities present, and that he consented to box in the outdoor ring only to accommodate the crowd. He does not like the outdoor heat, he said, because he says it is too slow.

From the moment Dempsey entered the estate in which the camp is located, with Col. Theodore Roosevelt Jr., and Rickard at his side, he was besieged, trailed and followed around the place by hundreds who wanted to shake hands

with him or snap his picture.

Dempsey, attired in a blue coat,

white trousers, white shirt and white tie, turned down at the rim, was the magnet for the time he arrived until his departure for New York on Rickard's private yacht. He was Rickard's guest with 30 others.

"Let's Go Get My Goat," Says

Tom.

I never like crowds and this one got on my nerves," Heene told the former champion.

I have found nothing so like rolls over a duck's back," Dempsey advised.

No one knows what Dempsey said to the challenger when he visited him in the dressing room

after yesterday's workout. They talked earnestly for 15 minutes.

If Dempsey gave him any pointer concerning Tunney's weakness, they kept that information strictly to themselves.

Jimmy Heene, the challenge-

r's trainer, refused to say who

the last time he shook hands with

Heene, the New Zealander

knocked out Jim Maloney in 77

seconds.

"Well, I hope this goes the same way," said Dempsey as he grabbed

Heene's hand for a farewell shake.

I've had a lot more sparring with nations than I expected at the start.

Some of them didn't show so well and others grew tired of taking the gaff. So changes had to be made.

Phil Mercurio has stuck through it all, and the rounds were boxed together did me an immeasurable amount of good.

They've come and gone, these boys, and I have faced a lot of different styles. That this was good for me, too, I think everyone will admit. I haven't overdone anything, but I am quite sure that I did enough work to get perfect fit.

I noticed several stories about my lack of grace in bag-punching.

I have seen boxers who were vic-

tried at doing tricks with the bag

but who never amounted to anything in the ring. It doesn't seem to me that I have to bother much with developing the grace of a to-dancer.

I've got it figured out that I'm going to win the fight by plugging

and not by doing a dancing or bagpunching act.

I'm going to do the right thing

before the bout. It will give me back the touch of the city again

and be fine relaxation.

TUNNEY STUNS KUCK IMPRESSES SPARRING MATE, ROBERTSON IN SHOT PUT DRILL

By the Associated Press.

SPECULATOR, N. Y., July 22.—

Gene Tunney intends to defend his heavyweight crown like a true

champion, by knocking out Tom

Heene in one of the early rounds of their 15-round bout at the Yankee Stadium next Thursday night.

Most experts considered Tunney a much better boxer than the New Zealand blacksmith and believe he would have little trouble in outpointing the challenger. But Tunney, who has signed a contract with Tex Rickard for 1929 on a percentage basis, appears willing to gamble on the privilege of being a record-breaking card in future fights.

Maybe He Was Kidding.

Experts are now inclined to think he has been kidding them since a half training last May. For a half minute yesterday afternoon

he and Tunney, quick as lightning, shot in three right hooks to the jaw with machine-like rapidity.

Though Tunney's fists were covered with heavy training gloves,

Mays was staggered. The three rounds, according to the consensus of the newspaper men, many of whom were fresh from Heene's training quarters, would have leveled any heavyweight in the world

if Tunney were wearing regulation

gloves.

One More Workout.

After this brief outburst, Tunney went back into the shell behind which he has hidden since he started training for the third round coasted through the third round with Mays and three more with

Billy Vayda, the other sparring partner. More than 1000 persons braved yesterday's downpour to see the workout.

Let's go program called only for a short hike up and down hills

and dunes about Lake Pleasant.

When Tunney weighs in a few hours before the fight he will tip

the scales at 189 pounds.

Acid Stomach

Excess acid is the common cause of indigestion. It results in pain and sourness about two hours after eating. The quick corrective is an alkali which neutralizes acid. The best corrective is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.
It has remained standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

One spoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia neutralizes instantly many times its volume in acid. It is harmless and tasteless and its action is quick. You will never rely on crude methods, never continue to suffer when you learn how quickly, how pleasantly this premier method acts.

Please let it show you—now.

REVOLUTION FAILS IN LISBON, MUTINY IN ARMY QUELLED

Seven Killed, 30 Wounded
When Loyal Troops Fire
on Barracks to Suppress Uprising of Regiment.

By the Associated Press.

LISBON, July 22.—Three former Cabinet ministers are among those under arrest today after seven persons had been killed and 30 wounded in a short-lived attempt at revolution.

The Government in an official statement said the "movement had a political character, being directed against the present regime, but it lacked the moral atmosphere for success."

The trouble began Friday night
when some officers of the seventh regiment channeled at Castilhos barracks mutinied. They prevented their commander from entering the barracks and tried to involve a portion of the Lisbon garrison in the movement.

Loyal troops laid siege to the barracks. Artillery took up positions around the mutinous troops.
Traffic in the streets was stopped and all night pickets and armored cars patrolled them.

A storming force supported by artillery started a vigorous offensive on the barracks Saturday morning. "During the attack on the barracks, the artillery did some damage to adjacent houses, injuring some occupants, the total casualties being estimated at seven killed and 30 wounded, including one mutinous officer and some soldiers," the statement said.

The Government announcement declared that after the loyal troops attacked the barracks the rebels submitted quickly and about 8 o'clock in the morning the mutinious officers some non-commissioned officers and civilians, who had joined the movement were arrested. The statement added:

"Other Outbreaks Suppressed.
"The Government, being aware of the existence of other insurrectionary centers outside of Lisbon, took similar precautions with complete success to prevent any outbreak."

Many arrests were made in Lisbon, Oporto and other cities.
Among those taken into custody were several former officers who cooperated after the revolution of last year.

The Government statement said that the army, navy, national guard and police "manifested once more their entire adhesion to the Government, which is completely master of the situation." It was announced that thus normal life was insured and the restricting measures had been lifted.

REBUILT CHURCH REOPENED $12,000 Spent for Repairs on Fountain Park Edifice.

The Fountain Park Congregational Church, Fountain and Aubert avenues, was re-opened yesterday with the completion of improvements costing $12,000. New pews, a new parquet floor, new carpets, ceiling lights and a tile roof were installed, and the interior was re-decorated.

Dr. Frank G. Beardsley, the pastor, criticized churches which close during summer months in his sermon. "You might just as well close the hospitals," he declared. "If the church is to fulfill its mission, it should function regularly every Sunday in the year."

Mrs. Hussey Ordered to Asylum.
By the Associated Press.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., July 22.—
After Dr. Virginia Alvarez Hussey, facing her husband in the Montgomery County jail, persisted today that she had killed him, District Attorney Rensinger directed that she be removed to the State Hospital for Mental Diseases.

Meanwhile her husband, Lindley Hussey, writer and chemist, is being held in jail awaiting hearing on warrants which Dr. Hussey swore out several days ago. Mrs.

Dr. Hussey also had a warrant issued, is at liberty on her own recognition.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Stiber, 2634

someone had unlocked a screen clothes of the infant was a note which read:

"Dear Mrs. Stiber: I know you but you don't know me. I know you will be good to my baby. You are the one I want to have him."

Heflin Would Bar Catholics.
WOODRIDGE, N. J., July 22.—

Senator Heflin told 400 persons here yesterday that if he were President he would forbid any Catholics from entering the Uni-States for five years. He was the speaker of the second annual field day of Albert Pike Klan No. 2 of Lutherford. They mean to pull down the Stars and Stripes," he said. "They will, too, if we don't bow our knee to a foreign tentacle. They tried to flood the country with Catholics through immigration gates and the flood had something to do to stop the flood."

MEARS TELLS HOW HE AND COLLYER BEAT THE MOON AROUND EARTH

Route of Record-Breaking Journey Around World by Ship and Plane

HAMPERED BY FOG, RAIN AND WIND ON LAST LEG OF TRIP

Globe Girdlers Forced to Stop Three Times on Flight From Minneapolis
to New York.

BECAME LOST 150
MILES FROM GOAL

Took Two Hours to Get Back on Route — He Gives Impressions of Russia.

By JOHN HENRY MEARS, Globe Girdler Who Set Travel Record.

(Copyright, 1928.)
NEW YORK, July 23.—We are proud and immeasurably happy indeed to be back in New York after making the swiftest trip around the earth ever made by man and also to be the first persons to beat the moon. It takes the moon 27 days and five hours and we defeated it by four days.

We have had a thrilling trip, not the least impressive and dangerous parts of it being the home trip
from Minneapolis to New York, which required three stops because of fog, wind and rain. We stopped at Chicago, Cleveland and near Harrisburg on the way. We were within 150 miles of New York at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon when the fog blanketed us. We wasted two hours or more in getting back to a route which would take us out following the Susquehanna River.

Russian Officials Courteous.
We want to say we were greatly impressed by the courteous treatment accorded us everywhere, especially in Russia and Siberia.
The Soviet Government went out of its way to be kindly and helpful.

We are both most grateful also to the Canadian Pacific system for its sportsmanlike and kind treatment.
Capt. Hoskins of the Empress of Russia brought us into Victoria,
B. C., 12 hours ahead of schedule,
Friday night instead of Saturday morning. The steamship companies only achieved this at a large expense in the expenditures of fuel.

We did not have to go through customs anywhere on our long trip, which saved us not only time but our nerves.

We left Moscow at 1 p. m. on a Saturday, after being photographed and dined by city officials, officers of the flying field and representatives of Moscow newspapers.

410 Miles in Five Hours.
Capt. Collyer took a direct course by compass to Kazan, where we arrived at 7 o'clock, making the 510 miles in five hours. We found an excellent flying field and were greeted by a large crowd including Soviet officials who were most cordial but who spoke little English.

They put a force of men at work servicing the plane. We climbed into an automobile of ancient vintage and were driven to the town
five miles away. Kazan is a town of 20,000, with poverty everywhere in evidence.

The people are poorly dressed and the houses are little better than shacks. We were taken to a hotel and shown to our rooms, where we were visited by officials from the university, who spoke a little English. They informed us that we were the guests of the Kazan branch of a flying organization of 2,000,000 members spread throughout the Soviet Republic and devoted to the advancement of aviation. Kazan is located on the banks of the mighty Volga River, made famous by the song. Dinner was served to us in our rooms and consisted of meat, black bread, potatoes and a bottle of very good wine.

Turning in at 11:30 p. m. we were up and on our way to the flying field, where we found our plane under guard of soldiers. The gas tanks had been filled and we were in the air at 2 o'clock just as dawn was breaking.

Ran Into Windstorm.
On our trip to Kourgan, over the Ural Mountains into Siberia, we passed over thousands of acres of wheat. We ran into a violent wind-storm in the mountains and an hour were tossed about like an eggshell on an angry sea. But the old plane fought her way through in gallant style and we landed at Kourgan at a little before 9 a. m., a run of 704 miles in less than seven hours.

Several thousand persons gathered to meet us there and the commandant of the district invited us to luncheon. Collyer decided he would best stay and attend to the servicing of the plane and I climbed in an old locomotive and started. It was raining hard and the road was very muddy. We had only gone a mile or so when we got stuck in the mud and had to get in a horse-drawn rig with iron tires and no springs.

Russian People Gloomy.
Then began the roughest ride of my life, the four miles reamed 20.
We found Kourgan similar to Kazan because of its poverty and shacks. We found the thing that struck us most in all Russia and Siberia was the absence of laughter.
The people wander about aimlessly, never smiling, showing it will take years before they outgrow the effect of the persecution they have suffered under the rule of the Czar.

Novabinsk seemed a little more prosperous than the other towns and the people not so gloomy. We were in the air at 2 a. m. Leaving there we made the hop of 532 miles to Krasnojarsk in a little more than five hours. We were half a day behind our schedule.
We were greeted by the usual reception committee which brought us lunch to the field.

This was spread on a blanket on the ground and consisted of black bread, sausage, caviar and wine.
Hundreds of people were at the field but showed little interest and appeared dull with expressionless faces. It took an hour to refuel and then we started on our longest non-stop flight of 1668 miles to Chita.

We passed over Lake Baikal at 3 p.
m. and then crossed Siberia's largest lake, Baikal, and then went on to Chita 468 miles away, where we arrived at 8 o'clock.

Catch Up With Schedule.
At Chita we had caught up to our schedule for the first time since leaving New York. Here our reception committee spoke excellent English. While our plane was being serviced we were driven to a hotel, where an elaborate supper was served with many kinds of wine. We retired to our room at 12 to find it contained a single bed.
Collyer beat me to it and I lay down on three chairs and tried to sleep for an hour.

We were called at 1 a. m. and were in the air at 2 o'clock to commence our longest non-stop hop of 1280 miles to Mukden, and as usual, without breakfast.

We crossed the border into China flying low, so that the Russians could check us out. After crossing the border we skirted the famous Gold Desert for 200 miles and then flew across the Noni and Sungori swamps for 200 miles and of all the desolate, God-forsaken places on earth that was it. It was said to be infested with brigands and man-eating tigers and at least it is no place to run out of gas. We had nothing to eat but four small slices of stale bread that had been in the plane for three days. It tasted mighty good.

First Bath in Days.
We arrived in Mukden at 3 p. m.
and were met by American Consul

Myers and officers of the Standard Oil Co. and Gen. Wan Shin Chang, chief of aviation. We first were taken to the clubhouse, where we were officially welcomed by the Chinese officers and toasted with much champagne. Then we were taken in hand by the kindly Standard Oil people and driven to the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Fitzsimmons, where we had our first bath since leaving the Olympic. A nice hot bath, and believe me, we needed it. We had a cold lunch and took two hours of much-needed sleep. We retired at 11 o'clock and were up at 1, when we had the first real breakfast on our hop across Europe and Asia and started for the aviation field accompanied by all our friends.

The American Consul had provided us with a pass to get through the gates of the city but as we came to the inner wall we were held up for 15 minutes when a long pow-wow was held before deciding that we could pass through.
The same thing happened at the outer wall. The city had not yet recovered from the recent assassination of its war lord, Gen. Chang, and was really in a state of martial law. We passed the arsenal, one of the largest in the world, a mile and a half long. Every hundred feet we were stopped by the Chinese sentries and made to show our credentials. It was two or three hours before we got to our plane.
Their hangars were the finest I had ever seen, built of 100 planes.
They actually had several modern planes and a lot of junk.

Chinese mechanics wheeled the "City of New York" out and at 3 o'clock, after bidding farewell, we started on the most thrilling ride of our trip. As we crossed the border into Korea the oil began spouting out of the instrument board, which meant leaks in the oil line.

Collyer Old Air Mail Flyer.
If anything had gone wrong with the oil system our motor would have burned out in a few minutes and there was no place within a hundred miles where we could have landed the plane without cracking up. Collyer signalled me to take the control. I had never had a stick in my hand before but there was no choice. I took the controls and held her steady while Collyer climbed half way out of the plane, opened the hood around engine and repaired the leakage.

A mechanic at Mukden had failed to screw the cap down so carefully and when the oil became hot it expanded and was coming out through the cap. Meantime I was standing up straight. No mother was ever so interested in the safety of her child as I was in Collyer.

We flew through fog all the way from China to Japan. We reached Osaka about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, where a large crowd was assembled. Taking off later, we finally located Tokio and set out in the direction of goal 20 miles away. We had to return to Tokio three times to find the beacon and in the last 15 minutes there were only a few cups of gasoline left when Collyer picked up the beam-bon. A forced landing in the rice fields would have meant death.
The rest of the trip was comparatively easy. We caught the Empress of Russia at Yokohama and crossed to America in the fastest time ever made by steamship, thanks to the courtesy of Capt.
Hosken.

U. S. ATTORNEY TO INVESTIGATE
HOOVER CAMPAIGN LEAGUE

Complaints Made on Activities of Organization, New York Federal Prosecutor Says.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, July 23.—United States District Attorney Charles H.
Tuttle has announced that he would begin investigation today of the activities of an organization known as "The National Hoover for President League."

The New York Hoover Campaign Committee already has asked the league to discontinue its activities on the ground that it was unauthorized by the Republican National Committee.

Tuttle said the Hoover forces in New York had complained to his office about the activities of the organization and at Hoover campaign headquarters it was said that Postoffice authorities had been asked to investigate the league's use of the mails in an alleged advertising scheme.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 23.—Suspension from practice for terms of two to eight months was decreed today
again three of the seven French lawyers tried last Saturday on charges in connection with the American divorce mill in Paris.
Three other lawyers and one process server were scolded. The seventh lawyer and a second process server were acquitted.

The reprimanded lawyers, Tual, Nouel and Pichot, were admonished to be more circumspect in the future. Similar injunctions were made to Ledriere, a process server.

The most severe penalty was imposed on Lawyer Moreau. He was suspended from practice for eight months. Lawyer Legend was suspended for four months and Lawyer Prestate for two months.

The acquitted persons were M.
Burkhardt, a lawyer, and Belanger,

MEXICAN CAPITAL
PAYS TRIBUTE TO CARRANZA

Crowds Line Streets as Body of Flyer Is Carried 10 Miles From Train to Palace.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, July 23.—The body of Capt. Emilio Carranza, young Mexican good-will flyer who crashed to his death while on a return flight to Mexico City from the United States, was returned to the capital of his country today and was met by huge crowds of mourners, who lined the streets.

Residents of Mexico City said that never had they seen such large crowds in the streets. At least 250,000 persons watched the cortege as it wound from the town of Tacuba, five miles outside of the city, to the National Palace, about 10 miles.

President Calles received the body at the National Palace.
Among the officials waiting there was Dwight W. Morrow, American Ambassador to Mexico, and members of the American Embassy staff.

Bands played the Mexican National anthem as the pallbearers, who were among the highest officers in the army, took the casket
from the funeral train.

The cadet of the Military Academy and the Presidential Guards, the pick of the army, escorted the body. Thousands of citizens, from barefooted Indians to officials in morning coats, swung into line behind the military units and the long procession began its journey lasting several hours to the War Department in the wing of the National Palace, where a cata-falque had been placed.

Gen. Juan R. Ascari pronounced a funeral oration. Then a guard of honor was stationed over the body to keep watch until tomorrow's funeral procession to the cemetery.
Airplanes escorted the funeral train into Tacuba, although it was a cold, rainy morning.

The Stars and Stripes and the Mexican flag were entwined on Capt. Carranza's casket, which was almost hidden under a mass of flowers thrown by many thousands as the cortege approached the National Palace.

Many persons had brought a handful of flowers and showered
the casket as it passed, and the flowers made a trail which marked the passage of the cortege through the Capital.

Seeks Views on Military Training.
NEW YORK, July 23.—Dr.
George A. Coe, chairman of the Committee of Militarism in Education, announced yesterday he had addressed letters to the presidential candidates asking them to rate their respective positions on compulsory military training in high schools and colleges.

While fighting was in progress
foreign warships landed patrols.
One American sailor was wounded
in the hand by a stray bullet.
The fighting lasted 18 hours. It ceased this evening. The foreign quarter, however, is in a complete state of defense and the precautions will be continued on the possibility that the fighting may be renewed.

While communications were being established between war vessels in the harbor and the consulates a member of the American naval shore patrol was shot.

Leroy Webber, American Consul, called on the Chinese authorities
today and demanded that an investigation be made to fix the responsibility for the wounding of the American. The British and Japanese Consuls appealed for naval aid.

NORTHERN CHINESE
TROOPS MUTINY
AND TAKE CHEFOO

Former Soldiers of Gen.
Chang Who Had Joined Nationalist Army Turn on Their Officers.

By the Associated Press.

CHEFOO, July 23.—The recently hoisted Sun banner of the Chinese Nationalists was hauled down here today and replaced by the five-barred flag of North China. The Nationalist military commander took refuge aboard a British vessel bound for Shanghai. His soldiers have been disarmed.

These developments came after severe fighting, which started at midnight between the Nationalists and 5000 soldiers who had served under Gen. Chang Tsung-Chang, military Governor of Shantung.
The 5000 had been incorporated into the Nationalist army, but renounced their new allegiance and gained control of the city.

Something to Forget

THE ANSWER TO "THE PRESIDENT'S DAUGHTER." By Joseph de Barthé. ("The Answer" Publishers, Marion, O.)

Last year, as a measure of self-defense, this writer was persuaded to spend a half hour with a book called "The President's Daughter." It was an investment in time, the reading of a total loss, and as a measure of self-defense it was a failure. No one is compelled to go to a sewer. Furthermore, the reader and the writer of any book are in a certain sense collaborators, and the reader is reading in collusion with the perpetrator of a "dirty trick." Anyway, the book looked at it seemed that for if the statements therein made were false, then the writer would have to be a crook, a traitor, a betrayer of a true, one dead; and it is not in the code of ordinary decency to allow one to live on the basis of a lie between the two. The protection of a lofty motive—no less than the protection of illegitimate children in general—seemed less than impressive under the circumstances.

Many readers must have felt that the book demanded an answer, and it would seem that the most effective one might have been given by a lawyer in the interest of the greatly damaged heirs. As it happens, the answer has now been given by a doctor, Joseph de Barthé, long the family physician and friend of the accused, and it has been given in a book. This seems unfortunate, being more likely, at best, to stimulate than to allay the tongue-wagging that has been on the decrease of late. It seems unfortunate for the further reason that the book offers little more than a sweeping denial of the charges in a style not free from windy fulfurling. One honors the friend for his loyalty without being favorably impressed by his oratorical flights, and one reserves judgment on the accused without being convinced by bombastic encomium.

There is, however, one striking bit of what may be described as expert testimony in the midst of much fulfurling, and it is of such a nature as scarcely to cover all the moral aspects of the case, if, indeed, there ever was a case. It is to the effect that the accused could have had no daughter, having been rendered impotent in young manhood by a severe attack of sunstroke.

The marvel of the radio is due to you alone. Had it not been for scientists, no plane had ever flown. We owe a debt of gratitude that we can never pay. To all the many masters of a scientific day: Nor are these men elated by their scientific gains. They're rather humble in the face of that which yet remains. Among the quests unsolved as yet, I trust they may assign. What makes the fish bite better on the other fellow's line?

As we consider some of the absurd claims of some of the politicians, it is a pleasing reflection that none of them was around when the account of the creation was being written.

Statistics show that the P. S. C. carried 1,234,777 fewer passengers in June than were carried in the corresponding month of 1927, and the rush-hour patron no doubt believes that it must have been some other car that the million and some odd did not ride on.

An American touch was added to the Schubert centennial by the presence of the American Minister and his wife, and the fact that there was not nearly enough beer.

Now that a Court has decided that the theft of some automobiles is only petty larceny, we can release the fact that the theft of some would be a good deed.

Imaginary Conversations. First athlete: Are you an amateur or a professional? Second ditto: That is what I would like to know.

One thing a man does learn when his wife makes a separate vacation is that there are any number of ways of making a bad cup of coffee.

Still, if he considers that fishing is a form of exercise, he probably thinks that that he does in place of golf is a game.

The only puzzling thing about some modern songs is that we do not know which we hate more, the words or the music.

The principal interest in the Tunney-fencey thing is the lack of interest.

There are occasions when discretion is the better part of belief.

Heavens! What a noisel! or the drooling, sniggering keyhole peepers!

SPOKESMEN: MODERN WRITERS AND AMERICAN LIFE. By T. R. Whipple (Appleton).

Today, with a certain number of current opinions well established, almost anyone with a flare for expression can turn literary critic and pose as an authority. Occasionally there appears a man with an independent mind and a real knowledge of what the American writer is doing at the present time. Such a man is Mr. Whipple, a professor of English in the University of California. It is true that he treats us to the usual theme of American civilization with its success-ship, its puritanism, its lack of a social ideal. But this author is not content to give popular views. He has studied the books of 10 writers—Henry Adams, Robinson, Dreiser, Frost, Anderson, Cather, Sandberg, Lindsay, Lewis, O'Neill—and from this mass of writing, he has chosen the keynote of his discussion.

R. S. The frequency with which scattered vulgarisms among our contemporary writers get themselves into scandalous situations or serious trouble with the law may have some significance for those who still believe that literary values are life values. It is not a question of morals in the puritanic sense. It is a question of normal intelligence. No man who is capable of misrepresenting human relations as such rotters can hope to live successfully. Nevertheless, thousands of immature people, sorely in need of sane guidance, are persuaded by the adroit publicity of conscienceless publishers and through mob imitation to regard such writers as "sophisticated" and "advanced." A man who is incapable of judging with fair accuracy the speed and distance of an approaching car, is hardly safe in crossing the street, and he is certainly not a fit guide for the blind and myopic in the traffic of this world.

'SONG OF THE FLAME' TONIGHT AT THE MUNICIPAL THEATER

Second Best Drawing Card of 1927 Season to Be Repeated This Week. The eighth week of the 1928 Municipal Opera season opens tonight with "The Song of the Flame," a modern composition which was the second best drawing card of the 1927 cycle.

Its attendance record last year has been surpassed in the open-air theater's history only three times, twice by "Rose Marie" and once by "The Student Prince." The music is by George Gershwin and Herbert Stothart and the book by Otto Harbach and Oscar Hammerstein II.

The attendance at the Forest Park theater fell off last week. The production was "The Lady in Ermine," which failed to attract as many patrons as "The Student Prince." Total attendance for the week was only 35,000.

DONALD BRIAN AT ST. LOUIS Howard Smith and Mildred Barker Offer Clever Travesty.

Donald Brian, who was a young musical comedy star when gay Prince Danilo first began to do the celebrated Merry Widow waltz at Maxims, and still remains a favorite if no longer so young, is the headline at the St. Louis Theater this week. He tells stories and sings songs among others a medley of excerpts from his big successes of the past, starting with "Give Her My Regards to Broadway" from George M. Cohan's "Little Johnny Jones." Remember that one? Twenty years ago everybody was whistling it. Brian also indulges in some cheap song-plugging which the audience might not be spared. Howard Smith and Mildred Barker offer a devastating travesty on the eternal feminine: Harry Anger and Mary Fair have a routine of comedy and dancing; Paul Yocan and Company present a bright and graceful dance revue. Schicht's Marionettes open the show. Julius K. Johnson, at the pipe organ, plays Victor Herbert's sprightly "Badinage."

The motion picture is "Modern Mothers," in which Helene Chadwick and Barbara Kent, as mother and daughter, are pitted against each other for the favor of young Douglas Fairbanks Jr.—rubbish of course.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, July 22. A study of a modern Peppys stirred out of sound sleep by a riveting rat-a-tat and lay conjuring up fortunes for the riveters, which was foolish. And came an amusing Scotch telegram from Dr. Rockwell, the harlequinade, also word from Brooke Johns, the banjoist, that he has become a Maryland farmer.

To a barber shop where the bootblack waded a shilling I could not brush a nickel out of my own pocket off his open palm, nor could I. Nor could Joe Moore or George Buckley. So to tatter in the Grand Central, being blessed with small town hankering for a depot.

To dinner at the Colony, but not paying the check, praise Allah. And George Jean Nathan there with Mrs. Willie K. Vanderbilt and others. Also Justice Johnson and Walter Wanger. Then to a dull show where I dozed and home to bed.

RED caps at the Grand Central and other railroad terminals have a sense of propriety about carrying luggage for arriving celebrities. They match colors for the honor and thus avoid rushing and snatching. If the celebrity is a guest of the city, the red caps reflect the hospitality by not accepting a tip.

ENERGETIC red caps often realize as much as $50 a week in tips. The average is around $20. Experience sharpens an uncanny power to spot the live wire. The most generous of all tippers is a new husband. Theatrical troupers and others who travel extensively are the most sparing. The biggest tip, recorded is a hundred-dollar bill. It was bestowed by a gentleman whose dog in a frenzy at being released from a baggage car after a trip from California rushed joyously through the station and was recovered a block away.

THE seemingly all-knowing clerks at the information bureau are a study in the art of acquiring useless information. They are rarely stumped, despite absurd questions. While loitering there I heard a woman inquire if a certain hotel in Washington would permit her to keep a parrot in her room. Another searching querist wanted to know if there was a toll bridge between Cincinnati, O., and Covington, Ky. They were answered instantly.

A RAILROAD station is usually the stranger's first contact with the city. It is where he likely receives a lasting impression. New York is more conscious of this than most cities. Every attendant is schooled in a cordiality that is warming. They go out of their way to render services which the rest of the rushing city oftentimes ignores.

FOR instance, sleeping on the station benches is not regarded favorably. One beefy fellow with his mouth agape was rattling the rafters with snoring. A station detective gently touched his shoulder and when he awakened with a surprised snort the detective began pleasantly to discuss the weather. The sleeper was not aware he had been awakened by a detective or had disobeyed a station rule.

A STENOGRAPHER in a downtown office building was suddenly missed by her fellow workers the other afternoon. A careful search was made. Finally, a bright office boy inquired: "Has anyone thought of looking on the boss' knee?" (Copyright, 1928.)

To Dedicate Hospital Addition. The Rev. Alphonse M. Schwitalla, S. J., regent of the St. Louis University school of medicine, will make the principal address at the dedication of the new $150,000 addition to St. Elizabeth's Hospital Sunday afternoon. Bishop Henry Althoff of the Belleville Diocese will dedicate the new structure.

Dr. Manthel-Zorn Memorial. Memorial exercises in honor of Dr. Carl Manthel-Zorn, author and poet, who died July 12, will be held this week by social and literary societies of the Lutheran congregations here. He was active in promoting literary societies for young people of the Lutheran Church since 1876.

SAFE ROBBERS' CHISEL WAY THROUGH WALL

Head of Stone Bros. Estimates Loss in Jewelry at $20,000.

Burglars early yesterday chiseled through a two-foot brick wall to enter the Stone Bros. jewelry store at 3157 South Grand boulevard, taking a large quantity of diamonds and watches from a safe which was hammered open.

Dr. Max Stone, 5626 Pershing avenue, head of the firm, estimated the loot today at approximately $20,000. He said an inventory was being made to determine the exact loss. According to police, Dr. Stone estimated the loss yesterday at $2586 in jewelry and $54 in cash, with $4000 insurance. The robbery was discovered at 8 a. m. Some time during the night, burglars climbed the fire escape to the second floor of an adjoining building, at 3607A Junata street. Entering through a laundry window, they went downstairs to the store of the Modern Electric Co., where they took $45 from a safe. Then they chiseled a hole, two feet square, through brick and mortar, to enter the jewelry store, which is at the northwest corner of Grand and Junata.

Most of the valuable jewelry was in a safe. The combination was knocked off, and about 300 pieces of jewelry taken, also $150 in cash. In departing, the burglars left no tools. Police, however, are hunting for finger prints. The store was opened under the present management about a month ago. Stone Bros. also conduct jewelry stores at 5323 Easton avenue and 2647 Cherokee street. The store on Cherokee was robbed a year ago.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

HUMBLE SONGS.
NOT all may sing the perfect song
That haunts their dreams always;
Few are the great, to them belong,
The splendid thoughts that swiftly throng
In subtle, matchless phrase.
The treasure most men own, instead,
Is but a simple thing,
A radiance dimly, faintly shed,
Such light a candle-flame can spread,
And such the songs they sing.

Yet candles sometimes bravely cast
Their pure and lambent ray Through doors where never sunlight passed,
And so the humblest song, if last,
May charm some gloom away.

THE WAY —OF— A WOMAN

By Marguerite Moores Marshall

THE COMMONEST DOMESTIC DRAMA

YOUNG man of 25, William H. Haddock, N. J., for strange reasons gave himself up to the police and explained that he had killed his wife because she was always nagging him to give her pleasures for which he had neither money nor inclination.

"Ever since we were married, my wife wanted pleasure, pleasure," he said. "She wanted to go to the movies all the time. I don't dance. She nagged at me to take her to amusement parks. I work as a laborer and earn very much money. I don't have money for such things. We quarreled and quarreled all day. In a fit of anger I strangled her to death."

Except for the tragic conclusion, the drama is one that is being enacted in innumerable New York homes—more the pity! There are many pretty, idle, pleasure-loving young wives who want more pleasures than they get. There are many husbands, a few years older, who work too hard to earn to little to say "yes" to every money-expending expedition proposed by the wife.

And he storms—like the sage. She thinks him a grouch and a heartless butterfly. There are recriminations and quarrels. She acquires any sense, and willingness to compromise, another marriage ends—not, as a general thing, in murder, but in the domestic relations or divorce court.

Most men automatically lay all the blame, in such cases, on the shoulders of the pleasure-loving, nagging wife. It seems to them that there are mistakes on both sides. The young woman who persists in hard-working, tired husband to "go somewhere" every evening and to spend money which he cannot afford is selfish, thoughtless and most irritating to have around.

We don't blame the man for resenting her exactions, for being irritated by her constant nagging. On the other hand, the young man who cannot afford a reasonable amount of recreation, or who is temperamentally antagonistic to simple pleasures as dancing, movies, amusement parks, has no business marrying the normal young girl who is used to these diversions and finds life gray without them.

When Julia Shillingham recently complained to Recorder Cain of Bayonne that her husband never took her out, the Recorder promptly mentioned him to take her to the movies the very next day.

The answer to the problem is obvious—compromise. For the sake of her husband's pocketbook and weariness, the pleasure-loving wife should curb her passion to be out to go all the time, while he should make an effort to satisfy in some degree her natural instinct for gaiety. Each ought to think of the other, instead of thinking so much of self. In so far as husband and wife do not naturally share the same tastes, they have to practice give and take if they are to get along.

Every marriage must be 50-50 in the adjustment of individual desires—"half the time I'll do as you wish if you'll do as I wish the other half of the time." And as we've said before, we think that the common 50-50 marriage, with both residing outside the home, helps childish young couples to establish a real comradeship. There is not only more money for good times—there is a less one-sided demand for them. When she, like him, is out and at work all day, a quiet home evening attracts not only him but her. Between their inclinations there is less of a great divide, and consequently, there is less nagging!

How to Remove Stains

Plain ice cream stains, in which there is no chocolate nor colorful fruit flavors, can be removed from washable fabrics by simply laundering as usual with soap and water. Water should be cool, or lukewarm.

If a grease spot remains after the drying remove it as per directions given in these columns for grease spots. Agents suggested for grease, chocolate or fruit stains will be found effective for ice cream stains containing the mentioned ingredients.

In unwashable fabrics sponge an ice cream stain with chloroform or ether; when dry rub in powdered chalk and next day brush off.

When You Entertain.

If you desire a decorative salad do it effectively. On a bed of shredded lettuce place a slice of watermelon pineapple. Cut the end of a peeled banana to fit into the central opening of the pineapple. The banana will stand upright. Cut the tip off the upper end of banana and into the top stick a toothpick with a maraschino cherry on top. Put mayonnaise in dots around the lettuce or as an edge around the pineapple. It can be served separately if preferred.

THERE ARE ILLUSIONS IN THE LIVES OF MAGICIANS AND THEIR WIVES

Mrs. Houdini and Mrs. Thurston Attribute Their Long Years of Wedded Happiness to the Fact That Mystery Was Maintained in Their Home Relations.

By Sally MacDougall.

IS it possible that some sort of perpetual mystery in the home is the thing that will keep a life-long bloom on the romance of marriage? Should a modern husband daily magic up his sleeve in order to keep a few amusing poses ahead of his wife's perspicacity, and thus maintain his place as a wonder-worker in her imagination? And is it advisable for the wife to have her own secret storehouse of mystery whose shelves are never empty?

Two New York women with many years of happy marriage in retrospect answer yes to all three questions. They are Mrs. Harry Houdini and Mrs. Howard Thurston, widow and wife of famous magicians. Mrs. Houdini believes that throughout the 33 years of her married life she was the happiest of women. Mrs. Thurston considers herself the happiest wife in the world. Both these women think it is possible—and profitable—for two people to live together in the closest harmony for years and years and yet keep certain reserves from each other. It seems that magicians and their wives always live like that, and that nobody ever heard of an unhappy marriage to a magician's home.

It was Mrs. Houdini who recently turned the searchlight on a certain technique of successful widowhood by admitting that in their lifetime together there were things in her mind day after day of which her husband knew nothing at all. Chief among these secrets was her occasional inability to see through much of the magic he performed for the public.

"My husband thought I was clever, and you don't suppose I was going to disillusionize him," Mrs. Houdini said. "He never told me how to do a trick. He expected me to use my wits and find out for myself. I wouldn't have asked him to explain, not for anything in the world. That would have spoiled something for both of us. In the first sentence I ever spoke to him I told him I thought he was wonderful, and that seemed to surprise him and make him happy. I still think he was wonderful."

Houdini's celebrated milkcan trick kept his wife puzzled for weeks, although she watched him carefully night after night and really tried to understand it. The contraption looked to her like an ordinary milkcan, and her heart would be clutched with fear every time she saw the thing being filled with water, her husband closed in and the six strong staples on the cover being locked with padlocks—locks and keys being sometimes supplied by strangers in the audience. The tension was happily ended in a few minutes when Houdini would be out and bowing to the audience.

"I'd have been ashamed to let him know that it had me mystified," she said.

One of the first things Mrs. Houdini ever did with her husband was a trunk mystery he invented and called "metamorphosis." It made a hit over 50 years ago in Tony Pastor's Theater and it was a success up to the last season they played together. With his hands tied behind his back, Houdini would take off his coat, borrow a coat from someone in the audience and put on the borrowed garment. He would then be shoved into a sack, the sack inclosed in a trunk the trunk locked and sealed. Mrs. Houdini would draw a curtain. In three seconds Houdini would be out, his wife would be in the trunk, wearing the stranger's coat, her hands tied.

In the weeks before he died the Houdinis were working on a new and sensational trick for the following season. Mrs. Houdini understood the work and the mechanism up to the point where it is necessary for the performer to escape. Houdini had worked on it for years and had finally solved what he anticipated as the greatest escape trick of his life. His wife supposed there would be plenty of time to study and learn the escape details. "But the secret died with Houdini. In the past year she and some magicians have worked at it day after day, but on the morning she talked with me in her home they saw no glimmer of a solution."

Mrs. Howard Thurston, who never knew how her husband took the bottle of liquor out of Mr. Volstead's bag.

Beatrice and Harry Houdini, respectively the daughter of Catholic parents and the son of a Jewish rabbi, were married at Coney Island when she was 17 and he 19. It was a runaway wedding from her home in Brooklyn.

"We lived in an element of surprise and mystery and we had so much fun," Mrs. Houdini said.

Mrs. Harry Houdini, widow of the celebrated illusionist, some of whose professional secrets died with him.

"He would talk the craziest nonsense over the telephone, pretend he didn't know me, make a date to meet me. 'Perhaps we'd go for dinner to some roadhouse and we'd keep on acting in a manner that would have surprised the other dancers if they had known that we were married before they were born.'"

Does some strange fabric of illusion surround the spacious Long Island home of the Howard Thurstons? Many years ago it was the home of another pair of famous magicians who were very happy there—the late Alexander Herrmann and his wife Adelaide, who still lives in New York. Mrs.

Thurston fancies that sometimes in the evening she sees "the Great Herrmann" walking about under the trees—wide-spreading Japanese willows, beeches, Chinese maples, silver spruces, cherry trees, and she imagines that he exercises a beneficent influence on all the strange acts that are invented there.

There is a studio on the grounds where tricks are tried out. Would a wire, who is also costumer and designer of stage sets, demand a detailed analysis of the conjurer's act that goes on there? Oh, dear, no! There are things that are never done, words that are never spoken in a magician's family. Take all the mystery out of any relation in life and what have you got left? Mrs. Thurston never goes to the studio while her husband and his Hindu helpers are working there. She admitted that much of their magic is a mystery to her for weeks at a stretch, that her husband has kept her peeped ever and anon since she was 17. Now their daughter, Jane, is 17—a beautiful girl, a singer and dancer and enough of a magician to be preparing for her debut in her father's mechanical next season.

"The mechanical tricks no longer puzzle me," Mrs. Thurston said. "But the psychological magic does. Mr. Thurston's 'suspended animation' mystery I do not understand at all. I don't delve into it much. After watching my husband all these years I do not know how to perform magic. He seems to take it for granted that I know what he knows. I never know when I'm going to be the most surprised person in the house. I can still get a big thrill from some surprising little thing—like the night in Washington when Mr. Thurston took a bottle of liquor from Mr. Volstead's bag, and the amused delight of the victim. That sort of thing is always lovely. But there never has been a humdrum day and night in all our lives."

Both Mrs. Houdini and Mrs. Thurston admit that while it is the magician's business to mystify an audience, it is the wife's business

Picking the Prizes For Bridge Parties

THE constant hostess feels many a time that she has completely exhausted her ideas for bridge prizes, at least those of actual use to the recipient. Long hours of searching in crowded and distressingly warm shops becomes something of an adventure to be dreaded. Now shops are offering clever little articles of utilitarian value in such departments as the stationery, toilet wares and even the notions and housefurnishings. The seeker after the novel and new bridge prize will find her shopping hours shortened if she plans her expedition to include one or all of these departments.

Toilet goods delight the heart of all feminine bridge players. Bath soap in a delicate scent is perhaps the safest choice, in that it will not conflict with a preferred and favorite perfume. A gay little box of bath soap opens like a book and displays four cakes in wrappers that represent cards. The box itself is lined with a red plaid and the black cover adorned with cards. Bath salts of various scents in fat china birds with wise eyes are gayly colored and attractive additions to the bathroom. They are about six inches high.

Playing cards themselves are welcome when they are bright and smart looking. Tricky black cards with bright colored symbols are very reasonable in price.

A tiny round checkered box filled with a half dozen fine linen handkerchiefs in colors, or with beautiful monograms is a prize every woman would be overjoyed to win.

The Sediment Trap of the

MAYTAG Cast Aluminum Tub Keeps the water clean

ONE of the important features of the Maytag tub is the cone-shaped bottom which forms a sediment trap to collect the loose dirt that is flushed from the clothes. It keeps the water clean, and also permits the tub to drain itself thoroughly without tipping the washer.

The effective shape of the Maytag tub was scientifically planned to promote vigorous water action in every inch of the tub all the time, so that the washing is done by water action alone—an action that keeps the soap thoroughly mixed with the water and removes even stubborn edge dirt without hand-rubbing.

Wringing the clothes is easy and effective with the Maytag. The large, soft rolls of the new Roller Water Remover hug every fold, lump and seam, removing both soap and water evenly from all parts of a bulky garment or a thin handkerchief.

THREE GENERATIONS

by WARWICK DEEPIING

AUTHOR OF
"SORRELL AND SON"

SYNOPSIS.

Old John Pybus, formerly a bookseller in London and later in Winterbourne, is serving as a porter in an inn at Castle Craven when his son Conrad sees him there. He has been estranged from both his sons since the beginning of the war and they have lost track of him. Conrad hastens to tell his brother, Probyn, that he has seen their father. Probyn, who has been in the army, had believed his grandfather dead, but he looks him up at the inn and tells him of the father's whereabouts. When Lance Pybus, who is in the army, takes a room in London, and after gaining his father's reluctant consent and a small allowance he devotes himself to writing. In London Lance meets and is attracted to Olive Gadsden, maid.

Mary Morris, a friend of Old Pybus, takes care of a blind brother. Lance finds himself growing interested in her. He breaks off the affair with Olive, but when she becomes ill he calls on her at the nursing home.

INSTALLMENT L.

ANCE felt awkward and self-conscious. When he went for a chair he was aware of Olive's eyes following him across the room. He placed the chair beside the table, so that he was slightly behind her as she lay there on her back.

"Well, what do they say?" She moved her head. "I can't see you, boy."

He moved his chair and found a smile, but her face was quite smileless.

"Well, what do they say about you?" "Appendicitis."

"And that means?" "Yes, tomorrow."

"Poor Olive! Frightened?" "Oh, not much. One gets hard you know."

She watched his eyes. They avoided hers and avoided them, consciously. He looked at the floor, and the flowers, and out of the window, and she could see him moistening his lips and frowning.

"They said I might stay 15 minutes. Look here, Olive, I've got something to say. We are friends still, aren't we? This is rotten luck for you. I want you to let me do a friendly thing."

Her eyes narrowed. "Oh, how?"

He looked at her two hands lying on the quilt.

"Well, as it might be—man to man. We both had to scrap for a living. And these places suit us—pretty ruinous. I can manage something now—and I may be able to manage something more in a few days."

"Just what do you mean?" "He slipped a hand into a pocket, and, bringing out an envelope, laid it on the bed."

"A couple of fivers, my dear. The best I can do for the moment, but I have asked someone to lend me 50. You'll take it as a friend?"

"Cash on delivery! No, thanks! I don't want your beastly money. Here take it!"

She flicked the envelope off the bed.

"And get out, get out quickly, or I'll throw things, you best-minded, magnanimous beast. Get out!"

She was white as the pillow and trembling, supporting herself on her arms. And Lance was standing, looking as white as she was, and a little shocked and bewildered.

"My dear girl, I—"

"Get out!"

Her voice had a shrillness. "And pick up that envelope, you had better get out or they'll hear me telling you things."

He bent down and picked up the envelope, and, facing her, backed to the door. His color had come back with a rush, and she had seen that she would be even with him. His work—indeed! Swollen-headed and superior young cad! She refused to reason. She would not allow that the relationship between them was an experiment in naturalism, irresponsibly begun, and more responsibly ended.

"You had better get out or they'll hear me telling you things."

come up smiling. I've got your flowers beside me. OLIVE.

"Any letters for me?" "No, sir."

He went up past her and, losing the door of his room. Two neat white piles of manuscript lay side by side on the blue cloth of the table. Before starting out on that visit to Olive he had been reading through the first 20 chapters.

He sat down and looked out of the window. He had brought away with him from No. 7 Blount street the memory of a girl propped up in bed on two quivering arms. She had screamed at him. Angry? Yes, she had been more than angry. You might have called it hysteria, and with that redness still lingering about his ears he had proposed to call it hysteria.

Olive had gone in the deep end—because—? Yes, just why? And when he had assured himself that he was doing the generous thing.

But had he been generous? Outside in the street and walking fast he had been conscious of a feeling of relief—yes, almost of exultation. The business was done with; he could get back to work, and he had felt himself gloating a little, youth with the apples in his pocket, and the gardeners cooled. But in that moment of meanness he had, and discovered, the face of that other and smiling self, the male thing, naked and unashamed.

Shocked? Yes, he had been shocked. He sat at the window and stared, and remembered that she had called him a cad. He had not been aware of his cadishness, but in the open street, with that smirking and cynical self-watching daintily beside him, he had discovered it. He was a cad. While believing himself generous he had behaved like a commercialist; he had gone to her in her moment of blackness, and coolly had closed the account.

But what was to be done? It was she who had closed the account and given him his dismissal. She had presented him with one of those human records that are put away but not forgotten, and which, when recurring, as they do recur, reproduce beauty or ugliness, a secret joy or a secret shame.

"My dear, I'm glad you asked me. Take it and use it as you please."

That letter roused in Lance deeper self-searchings and also a more subtle feeling of humiliation. He had gone to this one man in the world and had borrowed money from him in order to save his conscience after a sexual escapade. But how had it happened? How was it that the eyes of today were so different from the eyes of yesterday? Had he not been sorry for Olive? Had he not felt compassion and the desire to help her? But his compassion had been self-centered, sublimated egotism; it had not spilled itself over into an understanding of that other human self. He had imposed his pity upon Olive; he had treated her as the Olive of his own wilful conceiving, and not as Olive as she was.

CANNIBALISM HINT IN FATE OF MALMGREN ON ARCTIC ICE

Scandinavian Countries Angered Over Reports That Mariano and Zappi Ate Body of Comrade.

PRESS CRITICISES SILENCE ON FACTS

Account of Italian Survivor Wearing Swedish Scientist's Clothing When Rescued Causes Discussion.

By the Associated Press. MOSCOW, July 24.—The soviet rescue commission has received an official request from the Italian Government to search for the six missing men carried off in the bag of the Italia. An offer of two airplanes to assist was made.

The Italian Government also offered to finance repairs to the ice-cutter Krassin and to supply coal and food for a further expedition.

LONDON, July 24.—While resentment in Italy against hostile criticism of the Noble expedition is growing, feeling in the Scandinavian countries is running even higher. The Daily Mail prints a Copenhagen dispatch saying that it is persistently rumored that Capt. Alberto Mariano and Capt. Filippo Zappi, frantic with hunger, ate part of the body of Dr. Finn Malmgren, the lost Swedish scientist, who was with them.

Zappi, who was picked up with Mariano by the Russian icebreaker Krassin and later transferred to the Clitta di Milano, is reported at Copenhagen to be very ill as the result of hardships on the Arctic ice.

These rumors, it is thought, will tend to increase the friction between the Scandinavian and the Italian members of the expedition. So far as known here there is nothing on which to base the rumor of cannibalism, beyond the fact that Malmgren's body is missing and there has been great conflict in stories regarding his fate.

Italian Correspondent Urges Judgment Be Withheld.

By the Associated Press. OSLO, July 24.—Various phases of the Italia disaster seemed likely today to remain unsolved until an inquiry had been made by the Italian Government.

The eight known survivors of the fatal Polar trip were on their way home today. Official and unofficial spokesmen of the Italian Government have urged that judgment be withheld.

Urges Withholding of Judgment. Dr. Salvatore Aponte, Italian correspondent at Kings Bay, in a dispatch to the newspaper Tidens Tegn urged that judgment as to the death of Dr. Finn Malmgren be reserved until a full report of the tragedy can be published.

Dr. Malmgren was left dying on the ice, according to the statements attributed to his companions, Capt. Mariano and Zappi. Russian advice from Kings Bay state that Zappi, when rescued, was wearing in addition to his own, clothes belonging to Dr. Malmgren.

An unconfirmed rumor was in circulation that the Norwegian aviator, Capt. Hjalmar Riiser-Larsen, had found Dr. Malmgren's body.

Dr. Aponte, who is correspondent for the Corriere Della Sera of Rome, said it was too early to reach a correct conclusion either concerning events which led to the death of Dr. Malmgren or of the Italia tragedy.

Gen. Nobile Depressed. He asserted that Gen. Umberto Nobile was so weak and ill when he was rescued from the ice and so depressed by his mishaps and the unfortunate position of his comrades, that he was unable to make a clear report of what had happened.

"A detailed and clear report, however, will be written and submitted to the Italian nation and the world."

The Norwegian cruiser Tordenskjold and the French cruiser Strasbourg, which have been making a futile search for Roald Amundsen and his five companions, were returning to Tromsø today.
